SC PANEL IN THE WORKS TO SEEK STIR'S SOLUTION

Fears matters could snowball; impleads 8 farmer unions; extensive hearing today

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@New Delhi

WITH the deadlock persisting on the farmers' protest against three contentious farm sector laws, the Supreme Court on Wednesday indicated its intention to set up a committee of all stakeholders to open talks, adding the issue could soon snowball into a national one if not quickly resolved.

"This is what we propose to do tentatively. We will form a committee to resolve this dispute," the bench told solicitor general Tushar Mehta while hearing three petitions related to the protests.

"This panel will comprise members from BKU or any other farmer association that are protesting, government representatives and other farmers groups," the CJI said while issuing notice to the Centre on the three petitions.

As per the order, eight farmer organisations have been included in the case: Bharatiya Kisan Union (Rakesh Tikait), BKU (Sidhupur), BKU (Rajewal), BKU (Lakhowal), Jamhoori Kisan Sabha, BKU (Dakaunda), BKU (Doaba) and Kul Hind Kisan Federation.

Mehta told the bench headed by Chief Justice of India S A Bobde that the government is keen on engaging with the farmers, but it can happen only when the other side is open to discuss the laws, clause by clause. Instead, "they come with just one demand of taking back the law," Mehta rued.

At this, CJI Bobde observed, "Your negotiations have not worked apparently." Mehta claimed the agitation had been taken over by vested interests. "Whenever they came to meet our ministers, they carried placards with 'yes' and 'no'. Also, when the ministers spoke to them they turned around in their seats to show their back to the Central ministers," he said.

Delhi government counsel Rahul Mehra batted for the farmers saying they were compelled to protest in winter. "The Centre must do something to resolve their problems," he added. P9

Wary unions want to wait and watch

HARPREET BAJWA @Chandigarh

PROTESTING farm unions on Wednesday reacted cautiously to the Supreme Court's proposal to set up a committee to resolve the deadlock over the three contentious farm laws.

While some said they will decide on the court's suggestion only after receiving it in writing and taking legal advice, others claimed the new panel was meaningless since they had already rejected the Centre's proposal to amend the three laws.

Harinder Singh Lakhowal, General Secretary of BKU (Lakhowal) and Omkar Singh, General Secretary of BKU (Rajewal) said, "After discussion among farmer leaders today, it was decided that once we get any notice from the court, we will take legal advice and decide as to what to do."

Forming a new committee at this stage may not work, according to Sukhdev Singh, Punjab General Secretary of Bhartiya Kisan Union (Ekta Ugrahan). "The government should have formed a committee of farmers and others before enacting the new agriculture laws," he said.

Swaraj India chief Yogendra Yadav, who is also a member Sankyukt Kisan Morcha, said the SC can decide the constitutionality of the farm laws but it is not for the judiciary to decide on the feasibility and desirability of these laws. "SC monitored negotiation would be a wrong path," he noted.

Meanwhile, a 65-year-old religious leader Baba Ram Singh shot himself dead at the Singhu border. He reportedly left behind a suicide note in Punjabi saying he took this extreme step as he could no longer see the struggles of the farmers.

AGITATION FIGURED IN TALKS, SAYS RAAB

New Delhi: Visiting British Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab on Wednesday said he had discussed the ongoing farmers' protests at Delhi's borders with External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar during their interaction. India, he said, had a "vibrant heritage of peaceful protests", and the United Kingdom respects it | P9

Apple may halt supply to Wistron for code violations

Analysts feel the tech giant may temporarily move manufacturing to another firm in TN

BISMAH MALIK @Bengaluru

TAIWANESE electronics contract manufacturer Wistron, which has expansion plans in India, may temporarily lose more supply from tech giant Apple over the violation of the company code of conduct after thousands of its employees resorted to violence at its manufacturing facility in Narasapura last week, according to top industry analysts.

Wistron Managing Director Sudipto Gupta, in a letter to the Karnataka Government, dated December 14, stated that the company is committed to its over $250 million electronic manufacturing plan in India , which is a key to its global plans, and looks to expand its presence in this very important market.

"We bring the best of practices worldwide to our plant and operations and want to protect workers' interests. We will work together with the State Government to ensure that plant operations are resumed at the earliest," Gupta said in his letter.

He added that Wistron is deeply distressed by the recent incidents that took place at the Narasapura facility. P7

Not ₹437 cr, iPhone maker scales down loss to ₹41.25 cr

BALA CHAUHAN & V VELAYUDHAM @Bengaluru, Kolar

IN an important development, the Taiwanese iPhone manufacturer Wistron has scaled down the extent of damage at its Narasapura facility near Kolar to ₹41.25 crore from the previously stated ₹437 crore. The company issued a fresh letter to the Vemgal police in this regard on Tuesday evening.

Ironically, a day before the violence, on December 11, a Taiwanese delegation, led by Director-General of Taipei Economic and Cultural Centre (TECC) Ben Wang, had met Chief Minister B S Yediyurappa and Industries Minister Jagadish Shettar and had expressed keenness to discuss investment plans in Karnataka. The Wistron violence has come at a time when India is being touted as an alternative destination to China in the global supply chain of various products including electronic equipment. P7

List of trusted telecom sources to be out soon, blocking Chinese firms

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@New Delhi

AFTER taking a slew of steps against Chinese mobile apps, India will soon come out with a list of 'trusted sources', only from whom can telecom equipment be purchased by service providers.

Senior officials said the move is aimed at building indigenous capacity in the manufacturing of the telecom equipment, and cut down on the dependency on imports.

The Cabinet Committee on Security (CCS), chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi, on Wednesday decided that a panel headed by the deputy national security advisor will prepare the 'trusted sources' list, which seeks to secure India's communication network. The panel will also prepare a 'negative list' of companies, whose products will not be allowed in the country. The black list is likely to contain Chinese firms.

The National Security Directive on Telecommunication Sector, cleared by the CCA, directs all service providers to mandatorily source equipment from "trusted sources". However, it will not affect equipment that have already been deployed.

"The CCS has approved the directive in line with the needs of the national security, and accordingly the National Security Directive on Telecommunication Sector has been given the nod," said Union law and Telecom Minister Ravi Shankar Prasad.

The directive has provisions to qualify telecom gears made by domestic players in the trusted category, while those that meet the criteria of the DoT's "preferential market access scheme" will be certified as India trusted sources.

RIGHTS OF DAUGHTER

HC: Can't deny job to married girl on compassionate grounds

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

EVEN a married daughter of a deceased government employee can be considered for a compassionate appointment, the Karnataka High Court has ruled.

It held that excluding a married daughter on such grounds was illegal and unconstitutional. Allowing the petition filed by Bhuavaneshwari V Puranik on Tuesday, Justice M Nagaprasanna struck down the word "unmarried" in Rule 2(1)(a)(i), Rule 2(1)(b) and Rule 3(2)(i)(c) of the Rules, 1996, as it is violative of Articles 14 and 15 of the Constitution. He directed the state government to consider the petitioner's claim and pass an appropriate order within a month. The judge noted that if the Rule was left as it was, it would create discrimination on the basis of gender. If the marital status of a son does not make any difference in law to his entitlement for seeking appointment on compassionate grounds, the marital status of a daughter too should make no difference, the judge said.

Observing that marriage does not determine the continuance of a relationship between parent and child, the judge said a married daughter does not cease to be part of the family and law cannot make an assumption that a married son alone continues to be part of the family. P7

IT was not their war. But they fought and laid down their lives for our country. Hundreds of soldiers of Tibetan origin, who were part of Special Frontier Force (SFF), fought along with the Indian Army in the 1971 war. They also became an important part in the Bangla Liberation War.

In the last five decades, about 53 Tibetan soldiers have laid down their lives on the front lines. On the occasion of Vijay Diwas on Wednesday, 36 war veterans paid their respect to those who lost their lives in the war. They gathered at the war memorial at Doeguling Tibetan Settlement in Mundgod of Uttara Kannada district. The programme was led by Lhagpa Tsering, who is the Tibetan Settlement Officer of Mundgod.

Soon after the SFF was formed, many of the young soldiers in their early 20s, set off to fight the Pakistani Army from the northern parts of present Bangladesh. "When we reached Chittagong Hill Tracts region via Guwahati, we were confronted with the Pathan Regiment of the Pakistan Army. We were able to take over the post in less than 30 minutes," recalled Tsering Choephel, Assistant Political Leader, SFF, Mundgod. P5

VIDYAGAMA TO RESTART FROM JAN 1

Private aided, unaided schools to adopt programme, follow expert panel's recommendations

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

THE Karnataka government has decided to resume its flagship programme, Vidyagama, for school students from January 1. This time, the programme has also been rolled out for private aided and unaided schools, and classes can be held on the school premises for half a day, but not inside classrooms.

Vidyagama, that started on August 8, was stopped temporarily on October 10.

Primary and Secondary Education Minister Suresh Kumar said that Vidyagama had saved rural students from child labour and marriage. Vidyagama will be allowed in government aided and unaided schools premises, even as online and Chandana Vahini classes continue.

As per expert committee recommendations, classes will be conducted in a scientific manner, the minister said. Teachers of respective regions have been tasked with making out lists of students who can be grouped together.

Rural private schools have also expressed interest in holding classes, and the government has allowed budget schools to start teaching on similar lines on their premises.

For continuity in learning, Vidyagama has been an effective tool, with positive feedback from teachers and parents. Intricacies of the programme are being ironed out and measures have been listed for the Vidyagama programme:

M Tech, MBA and MCA aspirants get their documents verified as part of the admission process, in Bengaluru on Wednesday | EXPRESS

- Students will have to compulsorily wear masks, maintain social distance in school
- Thermal scanner check when entering the premises
- Use of sanitiser, soap, other sanitation measures will be followed, local social service bodies will also ensure sanitation
- Students only need to bring their own water
- ZP CEO to oversee execution of programme, DDPIs to be implementation officers
- Parental letter, permission compulsory
- Student-teacher ratio to be maintained, groups of 15-20 students to be formed, 7-8 groups to be allowed per day
- Three classes to be held, each a 45-minute session

We have made Vidyagama more liberal so that if a student, with the consent of his/her parents, wishes to come to school to learn in spite of possessing any other facility, he/she too is allowed. Let me emphasise once again that this is not conventional classroom learning. We will have to ensure our children learn in some way or the other since education is every child's right and the government has the responsibility of ensuring it. Preparations for hygiene and the safe conduct of classes in schools have been detailed in the circular submitted to the Karnataka High Court. The local authorities will support the department's efforts. It's a collective resolve of many departments of the government to ensure our children's learning. Vidyagama is a programme that supplements our students' learning in the best possible manner. This could be the best possible solution to tide over the prevailing situation. Whenever the situation is conducive, we will start regular classes. We are ready with all preparations to start face-to-face classes for Classes 10 and 12 anytime soon. It all depends on the opinion of the Technical Advisory Committee, whose meeting is planned tomorrow

'Textbooks not revised'

The government has not revised textbooks or created a new chapter, Minister for Primary and Secondary Education Suresh Kumar said, in response to political turmoil over a Social Science chapter for Class 6. It was alleged to have disgraced the Brahmin community. He said on social media that seers had contacted him personally to express their sentiments, and that steps would be taken to rectify the chapter. The state government was caught in a controversy after knocking out several chapters pertaining to religious and political leaders from the Social Science textbook, when reducing syllabus by 30 per cent. He said the department will decide on the syllabus cut after school reopening dates are finalised. ENS

Parents to organise stir on Sunday

ENS @Bengaluru

MORE than 500 parents of students of private schools will stage a protest on Sunday against these institutions for allegedly collecting unreasonable fees. Private schools are reportedly collecting levies other than tuition fees for second, third, fourth terms and also for new admissions for 2021-2022.

Voice of Parents-Karnataka, an association of the parents of various private schools in the state, had protested on November 14 on the same issue. But neither the government nor the schools showed any positive response, they said. This time, the association members said that they expect huge numbers.

They also alleged that these schools affiliated to CBSE and CISCE in Bengaluru and parts of the state have removed children from online classes for non-payment of fees.

"We are not going to give up. The government cannot say it is only concerned about students' safety and can't interfere in fee collections," said Ganesh Poojari, a parent and member of the association, whose son in Class 2 was cut off from online classes at a school in Chikkabanavara for non-payment of fees.

The members also claimed that schools had laid off approximately 25% teachers and non- teaching staff and are also paying the rest of them only 50% salary. Yet, they demand 100% fees, they said.

RERA secy to look into complaints

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

TO ensure that the pending 2,232 complaints with the Real Estate Regulatory Authority -Karnataka (RERA-K) against both registered and unregistered building projects in Karnataka are disposed of at the earliest, the authority has empowered the secretary to start the enquiry into these complaints at the earliest. This should come as a relief to home buyers, who have been complaining of delay in taking action against errant builders.

RERA undersecretary R Manjunatha issued a notification on Wednesday, asking the secretary "to issue notices against all unregistered projects if not done already".

The powers to conduct an inquiry is vested only with the RERA chairman and a panel of members. The authority was delegating these powers under Section 81 of the Real Estate (Regulation and Development) Act, 2016, it added.

Giving the reason, the notification said, "The chairman and members are already burdened with the enquiry proceedings in a number of cases for which court sittings are being held."

Pointing out to many cases where promoters have filed applications seeking exemption from registration, the order urged the secretary to scrutinise all such documents. "Exemption from registration could be granted by the Secretary RERA-K by means of a speaking order," it said.

The secretary will have to refer to the authority any complaint, including non-availability of civic amenities and issuing directions to the promoter to complete the project. "Complaints seeking individual relief in the nature of compensation and interest could be referred to the adjudicating officers," the notification added.

Secretary K S Latha Kumari told The New Indian Express that the move will help in addressing pending cases on a priority basis.

OVER 6,000 teachers, non-teaching staffers and members of the managements of private unaided schools in the state staged a protest on Wednesday demanding that they be included for the vaccination in the first phase free of cost. As they were facing financial problems, they demanded that food kits be distributed to teaching and non-teaching staffers on humanitarian grounds. They have also sought honorarium and free insurance.

Several teachers have started taking up alternative jobs since their salaries have been cut or they lost their jobs. Managements complained about the lack of finances due to the non-payment of school fees by several parents. Members of the managements of these schools have asked the government to draw up a minimum limit for fee payment.

However, later, they withdrew their protest after Revenue Minister R Ashok and Home Minister Basavaraj Bommai heard their grievances and assured them that their demands would be looked into. KAMS general secretary Shashi Kumar said Bommai instructed the commissioner of public instruction for administrative approvals.

17th December : Scorpio is my sign of the day, so it's time to remember that this was once the most important sign in the zodiac. That was sixteen thousand years ago when the Sun rose in this sign on March 21st, when the days and nights are were of equal length. If you're a Scorpion you can be proud of your heritage. And if you live with one, pay them some respect!

ARIES (Mar 21 - Apr. 20)
Ariens are supposed to take command but right now you should endeavour to operate on equal terms with others rather than always leading the way. And another thing - look after all practical details yourself rather than leaving them to partners.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 - May 21)
With any luck you should be able to take life at a relatively easy pace. The last thing you want to do now is accept more responsibility than you can handle, especially if you're already behind. It's an intense moment in many respects, but extra goodwill should be more than enough to see you through.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)
You may allow family, domestic and property matters to take their own course. This doesn't mean that you should abdicate all responsibility, but that you may allow certain developments to become much clearer before you step in and intervene.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)
If you really enjoy confrontations or relish pitting your wits against others, you are in a strong position indeed. However, if you imagine that you will have the last laugh, think again. There might be many other changes of circumstance before you can make a final decision.

LEO (July 24 - Aug. 23)
The opposition to your plans both at home and at work is dissolving. Your suspicions should have been satisfied, if not entirely laid to rest, and you may have very much more confidence about the next step in a personal affair. The question is - will a partner play along with you?

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23)
It's your turn to benefit from lunar alignments. You may well be more sensitive than usual, and hence easily offended, but also more compassionate and sympathetic to others' weaknesses. If you can make a go of a shaky enterprise, then you will win welcome praise - and eventually rewards as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23)
It's a relatively secretive moment. This is not to say that you have thoughts or feelings which must be kept from the light of day, but that you may be more comfortable if others are not given the opportunity to question you. Mind you, they might just have some good advice, if only you'd listen.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22)
Personally, professionally and financially many of your emotional storm-clouds have now started to disperse. However, there will be further pressure for change at home next year, so don't be complacent. As you have realised, there is always room for improvement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 22)
You can be among the most persuasive of people, but you'd better watch what you say just now. The simple reason is that you are about to change your mind again, so the last thing you want is other people hanging on your every word. You'd rather they made their own minds up!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20)
The time is fast approaching when you will have to lay your feelings on the line. For your own emotional safety, you should be very wary about making fresh commitments, at least those which are permanently binding. Perhaps you need to leave yourself an escape route.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)
No amount of pressure or persuasion should push you into making you consider social or professional changes until you're ready. New information could be revealed next week, and it might radically alter your perceptions, so hang on in there! Wait until the air clears before coming to firm conclusions.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - Mar 20)
The Moon's awkward angle continues for most of the day, urging you to pay extra attention to partners' needs, and also making it abundantly clear that you will get precisely nowhere without co-operation. If you go it alone, then you might actually take two steps back for every one you take forward!

Mass immunisation will need closer monitoring for adverse reactions, say experts

CHETANA BELAGERE
@Bengaluru

WHILE manufacturers await approvals for vaccines against Covid-19, the Union government will initiate a nationwide surveillance network to detect and respond to possible adverse events following immunisation (AEFI), which is important for approvals given for emergency use.

According to the guidelines released by the Union Ministry of Health and Family Welfare on Tuesday, post-vaccination health-watch centres must be set up in all states and Union Territories.

"The existing AEFI surveillance system will be utilised to monitor adverse events and inform the understanding of the safety profile of the vaccines," the guidelines stated.

Meanwhile Dr Sudhakar K, Minister for Health and Medical Education, said, the Centre has begun to put in place an elaborate mechanism for monitoring adverse events following immunisation (AEFI).

"The Covid vaccination programme will be unique also because it will only target adults, and state governments have been asked to rapidly detect and promptly respond to any AEFIs to ensure that public confidence in the new vaccine does not wane. Potential vaccinators are being trained with detailed instructions on infection prevention and control practices and management of minor, severe or serious AEFIs," Sudhakar said.

States have been asked to identify at least one AEFI management centre in each block, which can be a primary health care centre or a community health centre, a district hospital or even a private health facility that has medical officers and paramedical staff.

Every vaccination site will be linked to a designated AEFI management centre. All such adverse events will be reported through the Co-Win application developed to monitor and manage the Covid-19 vaccination programme.

Dr Sudhakar added that the Central guidelines state that beneficiaries must be counselled about adverse events which may occur after being vaccinated. These are expected to be minor such as local pain and swelling, and mild to moderate fever, etc. However, the list of expected events could be different based on the safety profile of the Covid-19 vaccine(s) that finally get(s) approved for use. All serious or severe AEFIs will be investigated by the district immunisation officer or the district AEFI committee.

Meanwhile, experts from Karnataka have welcomed the guidelines. "Mass vaccination campaigns for Covid-19 would require heightened levels of AEFI surveillance than currently available levels (which are designed) to monitor AEFIs in infants and children who are immunised with vaccines that have proven efficacy and have been used for years. We should not hurry with anything related to Covid-19 vaccines. We should also wait for trial data efficacy before we pressure manufacturing companies to give us the vaccine early," said Dr C N Manjunath, director, Jayadeva Institute of Cardiology and nodal testing officer for Covid 19.

He added that not just acute adverse effects, but even interim adverse reactions should be observed and listed.

Another senior health expert said the state must be prepared for AEFI. "Even when we undertake a universal immunisation programme which has been done for decades, some adverse effects are seen in children and pregnant women. We are seeing adverse events already in other countries (with Covid-19) so our states must be prepared for this and monitor it well," he said.

The Central guidelines say that preparation is required at all levels before and during the immunisation programme, "First of all, the readiness assessment has to be made prior to vaccine introduction. The teams will have to do field visits, review of data should be done. Later, there has to be daily evening meetings, standardised monitoring tools, mobile-based app, real time data from the planning unit has to be sent to the national level."

Contactless medical care in city hospitals

BENGALURU: Victoria Hospital and ESIC Hospital in Bengaluru have tied up with Dozee, a city-based private firm, to equip them with devices that will enable their medical staff to remotely monitor their Covid-19 patients. The devices measure heart rate, respiratory rate, oxygen saturation, sleep stages, and more in real-time with a medical-grade 98.4% accuracy. The contactless sensor has no external wires nor does it touch the user's body. "It is important to safeguard doctors and nurses by reducing the time they spend physically interacting with patients," said Avinash H R, assistant professor of general medicine at ESIC Hospital. KIMS Hubballi staff get a breather as corona cases dip

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Hubballi

DOCTORS and other medical staff at the Karnataka Institute of Medical Sciences in Hubballi are getting a breather from Covid duties as the number of new cases has dipped in the past few days.

With fewer Covid patients turning up, they have begun to turn their attention back to other patients who have begun trickling in.

Dharwad district has been reporting less than 15 fresh cases per day and the number of active cases was 92 on Tuesday. Of this, 64 people with mild to severe symptoms are in government and private hospitals in the district and 28 asymptomatic people are in home isolation.

Thousands of people from several districts come to KIMS for treatment as they consider it the lifeline of North Karnataka. Since March, the hospital has treated hundreds of Covid patients. At the peak of the pandemic in the district, the hospital treated 450 patients and medical staff voluntarily worked without leave for long periods.

Medical Superintendent of the hospital Arunkumar C said the hospital has 17 Covid patients at present, seven of whom are in ICU and the rest in regular wards. "The number of Covid-19 patients came down recently, which has helped doctors concentrate on general patients in the hospital," he told TNIE.

General patients, who had not visited the hospital due to lockdown and out of fear of the pandemic, are now turning up at the hospital. Over the last 15 days, the number of patients visiting every day has touched 1,500, close to pre-Covid levels.

Doctors and other medical staff who were working in Covid wards have been moved back to their previous departments, and are relieved about working without PPE suits and treating general patients, he added.

Council ruckus: Did not follow no-trust procedure, admits BJP

Just because ruling party was in tearing hurry, House rules couldn't be ignored, says Cong

A file picture of the ruckus that ensued in the Legislative Council on Tuesday over the passing of a no-confidence motion against the Chairman | EXPRESS

BANSY KALAPPA @Bengaluru

Tuesday's dramatic events in the Council may have led to much heartburn and name-calling, but a few BJP leaders admit, albeit anonymously, that the fracas was an "embarrassment for the party", and "wholly avoidable".

The BJP and Congress almost came to blows after Council Chairman Prathap Chandra Shetty's entry was blocked and his deputy was made to occupy the Chair.

Sources said Shetty, a Congressman, had volunteered to resign before the House was reconvened on Tuesday, but was advised by senior party leaders not to do so as the House needs to follow due procedure. It is said that Shetty again offered to resign after Tuesday's showdown, but was dissuaded.

Procedure mandates that a notice is served 14 days ahead, and the motion listed to be taken up in the House. "There is no reason why procedure should not be followed just because some ruling party members are in a tearing hurry," Congress leaders maintain.

One BJP leader admitted to the anomaly. "The embarrassment for the party and House was wholly avoidable. Our party had to only ask the Chairman to take up the no-confidence motion, as the Congress has lost majority. There was no need to place the Deputy Chairman on the seat. Everyone agrees that Chairman Shetty's conduct has been satisfactory."

Another BJP legislator said, "On Tuesday, the Council leadership was wrongly taken over by inexperienced persons in the BJP and JDS, who don't have much knowledge of procedures and rules. Instead of trying to wrest control of the House, they could have followed procedure, maintained gentlemanly conduct and pressed the Chairman to take up the motion."

With concerns being raised in the BJP about the anti-cow slaughter bill, Parliamentary Affairs Minister JC Madhu Swamy had said a few days ago that they were prepared for the crucial bill not being passed in the Council, should the JDS turn hostile, and instead, get it passed again in the Assembly.

Saffron party was scared of cow bill going to select panel

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

THE ruling BJP's apprehension over Anti-Cow Slaughter Bill being referred to the Select Committee is said to be one of the reasons for the party's insistence on taking up the no-confidence motion against the Legislative Council chairman first, before the House went ahead with other subjects listed for the day.

The tussle over the no-confidence motion led to unprecedented and unruly scenes, forcing adjournment of the House within 40 minutes of convening and without transacting any business on Tuesday.

"We were aware of the Congress' plans to get the bill referred to the Select Committee after it was tabled in the Council. Once that is done, the government would not be able to issue an ordinance," said a senior BJP leader.

"If the bill is defeated, it can again be taken back to the Assembly and passed, or an ordinance can be issued. But the Congress wanted to get it referred to the Select Committee," he said.

The bill was earlier passed in the Assembly and was to be tabled in the Council on Tuesday. After the Council was adjourned sine die, the government has decided to issue an ordinance.

Congress members too said that they were planning to demand that the chairman refer the bill to the select committee.

"The idea was to allow all the stakeholders to have a discussion. This is the worst piece of legislation and can be misused. All aspects of the bill need to be looked into in detail in consultation with all the stakeholders, including farmers," said senior Congress leader and MLC B K Hariprasad.

"They are trying to thrust their political agenda on the people," he said, and accused BJP members of trying to prevent the Council Chairman from entering the House.

Leader of Opposition in the Council S R Patil said that Governor Vajubhai Vala should take action against BJP members for their unruly conduct. "The Deputy Chairman can sit in the chair only when the chairman directs him or when the chairman is not present. But on Tuesday, the chairman was present in his office. BJP members not only made Deputy Chairman sit in the chair, but also lowered the dignity of the House," he said and demanded that the BJP members should be disqualified.

BJP MLC Ravi Kumar accused the Chairman of acting in a partisan manner and alleged that he is consulting the Congress spokesperson for a legal opinion.

Industry must help state with investments: CM

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

CHIEF Minister B S Yediyurappa on Wednesday sought the cooperation of the industry to make Karnataka the top investment destination in the country.

The State Government has initiated a number of measures to improve ease of doing business in the state, and industries should help in effective implementation of these measures, he added.

Addressing members of the Federation of Karnataka Chamber of Commerce and Industries (FKCCI), the Chief Minister said that acquiring land to set up industries has become easier after the recent amendments to the Karnataka Land Reforms Act and Karnataka Industrial Facilitation Act has been amended to further improve ease of doing business as industries get three years to get various approvals, he said, and added that the government is also working on making changes in the Labour Act.

Economic activities and supply chain that were hit by the Covid19 pandemic are returning to normal and big industries as well as small and medium scale industries resuming operations under such circumstances is an encouraging development, he said.

Even during these times of distress, Karnataka has attracted 42 per cent of all foreign direct investment (FDI) that has come into the country. Industries should cooperate with the government to ensure that Karnataka will emerge as the number one investment destination in the country, he added.

The CM said central and state governments have announced a number of measures to mitigate the impact of Covid on various sectors and also to revive the economy. Yediyurappa appreciated the FKCCI for its contribution to state's development.

OVER 4K WIN UNOPPOSED, BUT POLL PANEL TO CROSS-CHECK

ASHWINI M SRIPAD @Bengaluru

OF over 48,000 seats that are going to Gram Panchayat polls, over 4,300 members have been elected unopposed. But the State Election Commission will declare them elected and give them a certificate only after ensuring that they have not resorted to any unlawful methods to get themselves elected unanimously. For the first time, the commission has introduced a mechanism to double-check and manually verify all the details to ensure that the candidates have not won using money or muscle power.

The first phase of Gram Panchayat elections are due on December 22 when 3,019 panchayats of 117 taluks from all 30 districts will go to polls. Of the total 92,121 seats up for grabs, the election will be held for over 48,000 seats in the first phase. Official sources said this is the first time that such a large number of candidates have won unanimously. "There is an allegation that some seats have been won through auction. In other places, local politicians used their influence to get their candidates elected unopposed," official sources told TNIE.

State Election Commissioner B Basavaraju said all deputy commissioners have already been instructed to check if those elected unopposed have used pressure tactics or any other illegal means. If there is any evidence of these, the Goonda Act should be invoked, he added. "For the first time, we have introduced the double-check mechanism, where our officials or returning officers will visit the village and check if candidates withdrew their nominations only to allow someone to get elected unopposed. We have directed officials not to give winning certificates to candidates if found guilty.

Candidates will be declared elected only if the returning officer is convinced that the victory is genuine," he said.

On Tuesday, after it was found that 13 members from Sindigeri GP in Ballari got elected unopposed illegally, a case was registered at the local police station.

"We have directed officials to verify and only then proceed," Basavaraju said. Asked what happens to seats where candidates are disqualified, he said, "We will cancel the elections and hold them again in the coming days or in January when the polls to some Gram Panchayats are due."

Polls apart — reservation doesn't help this village

SUBHASH CHANDRA N S @Karwar

YOU would think reservation helps the backward classes. But Kinnara village, on the outskirts of Karwar, is facing a peculiar situation. A ward reserved for the ST has not witnessed elections since the last 25 years. This is because there are no members from ST in this village. As a result, this village is losing out on government grants.

Earlier, the ST reservation was for Boribagh ward and now it has been rotated to Ghadsayi ward. The seat has been vacant all these years as there have been no candidates for it.

The reservation is decided based on the strength of the panchayat members.

Reservations being mandatory for the Gram Panchayat elections, the seats were reserved for both Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribe down the years.

"The seats were reserved for SC and ST, but there were no candidates. However, last time two people from our village married girls from the Scheduled Caste community. But it has not been the same in the case of ST," said Ravi Kasbekar, a villager.

Last time, Chandrakala Kotekar and Jyothi Sandeep Goyekar were elected under SC quota from here unanimously. And according to the villagers, they will be re-elected.

"As per the rules, no outsiders can participate or contest in the GP elections under reservation. To add to this, people from outside do not want to contest elections here," said Surinder Patkhar, former Gram Panchayat president, Kinnara village.

At least 22.75 per cent of the total grants allocated is reserved for SC/ ST communities. "Earlier, we had returned ₹6 lakh meant for the ST community. Now, we are about to return ₹13 lakh," said Madura Naik, PDO, Kinnara village.

When this issue was brought to his notice, K Harish Kumar, Deputy Commissioner, Uttara Kannada, said that it pertained to policy decisions and was not within his powers.

SEAT AUCTIONING

Three held, nine cases filed in Tumakuru

ENS @Tumakuru

THE police have finally acted upon incidents of auctioning of seats in different Gram Panchayats by arresting three people at Turuvekere, and registering nine cases at Kunigal, Chelluru, Nonavinakere and Turuvekere police stations.

The arrested — Srinivasa, Sidde Gowda and Huche Gowda — were allegedly involved in the bidding process at Muddanahalli under Kanatturu GP.

In Kunigal taluk, Jayarama of Kadumattikere under Kittanamangala GP in Kunigal taluk was booked as a video of him calling the aspirants for bidding of a seat went viral on social media. Only Lakshmamma Ranganath has now remained in fray after, it is alleged, her husband bid and won the seat for her for ₹11.75 lakh. Other residents of the village Manjunatha, a lawyer, Ranganatha Magadaiah and Nagaraju, who were allegedly involved in the bidding process, too have been booked, the police said.

The police have gathered evidence that a few seats at Mavinakere Gram Panchayat in Turuvekere taluk were auctioned for ₹37.5 lakh and a seat reserved for a woman at Guddadahalli under Bidare GP in Gubbi taluk was auctioned for ₹3.75 lakh.

The Nonavinakere police in Tiptur taluk registered a case as a group of people allegedly tried to auction the seats at Anapanahalli and Alburu villages, which are going to the polls on December 27 under Phase II.

CAN a lemon or a sliced pumpkin or a doll help defeat a candidate? To gain an upper hand in this high-stake electoral battle at the grassroots, several candidates are turning to black magic as a means to trounce their opponents.

GP polls have assumed significance with the involvement of several top politicians in the campaigning. Lemons, sliced pumpkin, chillies, coconuts, pink colour powder, dolls, etc. are being kept near a rival candidate's house or at the junctions closeby. At Marakatti GP limits in Bailhongal taluk, recently a candidate was shocked to find black magic performed in front of his house. Various things used in black magic were scattered in front of his house on Monday midnight, a new moon night believed to make black magic very effective. The incident has left the candidate's family and villagers in a state of shock.

The candidate, on condition of anonymity, said he came to know later that his rival candidate got the black magic performed to win the elections. "Black magic practitioners were paid ₹25,000 to ₹30,000 to attract the voters," he added.

A candidate in Marikatti GP, near Belagavi, found several things in front of his house, which was later revealed to be black magic

Several villagers have appealed to the local authorities to initiate measures to stop black magic. Black magic practitioners have been in demand in the past few days with candidates approaching them in desperation.

It has come to light that several candidates approached astrologers too before filing their nomination papers. Some have filed the papers as per the 'muhurtha' while some others have launched their campaign as per the timing and dates fixed by astrologers.

"WE went on liberating one post after another till we reached Chittagong in a month's time. The terrain was the most difficult one but our soldiers were able to make it through," added Tsering Choephel, Assistant Political Leader, SFF, Mundgod.

"Tibetan soldiers from the North Columns fought bravely and stood their ground, ensuring the defeat of the enemy. Four soldiers from Mundgod settlement lost their lives in the 1971 war along with several others from the SFF," he pointed out.

Another veteran, Tsering Tamding, who is now 80 years old, has another heroic story. It was not even three months when he had joined training and he volunteered to fight the Pakistan Army. He joined his forces from the North-Eastern side and raided parts of present Bangladesh from Nagaland. "I was still under training when I joined the SFF column. The new recruits were trained even during their march towards East Pakistan. It was snowing, but we were determined to fight the war," he said.

Amruth Joshi, National Secretary, Bharat Tibetan Sahayog Manch, said that the members of SFF, who are born mountaineers have always given the Indian Army an edge over its opponents in battles fought on the ice-capped mountains of the Himalayas. "Be it the Indo-Pak Wars (1965, 1971) or Operation Vijay in Kargil (1999), the soldiers from SFF have been in the forefront of protecting Indian borders. There is a long-pending demand to honour these veterans who fought wars for us," he said.

Student held for rape and murder of friend

Police await postmortem to know cause of death

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

A 21-year-old paramedical student has been arrested for alleged rape and murder of his female friend at his house in Byadarahalli near Magadi on Wednesday morning.

A postmortem report however is awaited as the initial explanation given to the private hospital where the 20-year-old victim was rushed and declared dead was that she had died of a possible cardiac arrest during the act which had been through mutual consent, the police said.

According to the police, the accused youth, a final year student of a private college, had been asked by the victim to escort her to her college to pay her fees. Her elder brother is said to be a close friend of the accused youth's family. However, the accused reportedly invited her home before leaving for college. The alleged incident took place when the victim reached the accused man's house.

The police have filed a rape case as the accused had rushed out of his house and alerted his neighbours and friends that the girl had fallen unconscious. They then rushed the victim to a nearby private hospital, where the doctors declared her dead. But a preliminary medical examination revealed alleged sexual assault. The doctors at the hospital then registered it as a medico-legal case and alerted the Byadarahalli police who were informed about a "sexual assault" before the young woman's death.

The police said the accused had returned home from hospital after the woman was declared dead. Based on the medico-legal case by the hospital, the police gathered details about the accused from his house owner and arrested him. Police have taken the accused into custody for investigation.

Although the police have filed a rape-murder case, post-mortem examination is scheduled to be conducted on Thursday to know the cause of death of the victim, and whether the accused sexually assaulted her.

Pinarayi weathers storm, to set sail for second term

It's a victory over fake campaigns against the chief minister, says senior CPM leader

ANIL S @ T'Puram

In his hour-long media briefing on Wednesday, a seemingly confident Pinarayi Vijayan left no room for speculation on who sets the agenda for the next Assembly election.

Just three days into the polls, the UDF and the BJP had questioned the physical absence of Pinarayi from campaigning. In a span of minutes, an array of Left leaders had come out in Pinarayi's defence. The Kannur strongman is now all set to emerge more powerful within the party and the Left too.

On Wednesday, CPM secretary in-charge A Vijayaraghavan stressed that it's a victory against the fake campaigns against the chief minister. Pinarayi himself chose to directly take on Opposition UDF, while noticeably sidelining the BJP in the course of his media briefing.

In fact, the verdict is seen as a victory for Pinarayi's pragmatic politics. It was Pinarayi who took the lead in bringing Jose K Mani to the Left fold, despite strong resentment from the CPI and even a section within CPM. Clearly that has paid off hugely in Left's favour.

Pinarayi had to face a bit of resistance from within recently. The verdict has ended all speculations of any such uprising against him in near future, with the victory silencing these critics who were eagerly waiting to pounce on him once polls were over.

Ever since he took the reins of the CPM two decades ago, his was the major voice in the Left. Of late, it became the lone voice. Never before has the Left front and its government been such a unified force. It was his decision to anoint A Vijayaraghavan as party chief, when Kodiyeri Balakrishnan stepped down. "The results will instil a confidence in Pinarayi of a return to power in 2021. This realisation would also make him a more careful administrator. Critics within the CPM, including those in central leadership, will be forced to toe his line now more than ever," said a senior leader.

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

A day after the kingpin of a drug peddling racket was arrested, Central Crime Branch (CCB) sleuths nabbed four interstate drug peddlers in Bengaluru on Wednesday.

The suspects had allegedly brought along drugs valued at Rs 1.15 crore, to be sold for the New Year celebrations. CCB officials, who have been carrying out investigations into the source of drugs in and around the city, had on Monday arrested a Nigerian national, identified as Chidiebere Ambrose, alias Chief.

The four individuals who were arrested on Wednesday were identified as Thirupala Reddy (32), a resident of Hebbal; Kamalesh (31) and Sathish Kumar (27), both residents of Krishnagiri in Tamil Nadu; and Ajaz Pasha (45) of RT Nagar.

A senior police officer said that officials of the Narcotics Wing of the CCB had raided a house in Amruthahalli police limits on Tuesday, and arrested the four peddlers. Police also recovered 5.6kg of hashish oil and 3kg marijuana, together worth Rs 1.15 crore, besides impounding a car and a scooter.

During interrogation, the accused confessed that they had stored the contraband to be supplied during the upcoming New Year celebrations at a high price tag. They were mainly targeting private firm employees and college students. Some of their regular customers had ordered the drugs in advance, and paid for it online. Police gathered details of their network in and around the city. The accused allegedly meet students and IT employees in pubs and sell them drugs. The four reached the city a month ago by train, and had brought the drugs from Odisha, Tamil Nadu and Andhra Pradesh.

Law cannot bestow too little on women: HC

THE exclusion of married daughters from the ambit of expression of 'family' in the Karnataka Civil Services (Appointment on Compassionate Grounds) Rules, 1996, is illegal and unconstitutional. Hence, denying appointment to a married daughter on compassionate grounds is violation of Article 15 which prohibits discrimination on the basis of religion, race, sex, gender, the judge said.

Bhuavaneshwari V Puranik, resident of Marathahalli in Bengaluru, is the daughter of late Ashok Adiveppa Madivalar who was working as Secretary in the office of the Agriculture Produce Marketing Committee (APMC) at Kudachi village in Belagavi district.

The deceased government servant has a son and a daughter. While the son was unwilling to take up the job, the daughter wanted it. But she was denied on the ground that she was married. She then moved the high court.

The judge said when "nature bestows so much on women, the law cannot bestow too little." "The interpretation of law has always undergone a change with changing times. This case is a classic example of how law is anachronistic in terms of the rules," the judge added.

'Nod granted to BTC for online betting withdrawn'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Bengaluru

THE State government on Wednesday informed the Karnataka High Court that it has withdrawn the permission granted to the Bangalore Turf Club (BTC) for online betting.

The state took this step after the court questioned the government for giving permission without any authority of law, in response to a PIL.

Taking note of a communique dated December 10, 2020, issued by the government withdrawing approval given in principle for online betting on July 2, 2020, a division bench of Chief Justice Abhay Shreeniwas Oka and Justice S Vishwajith Shetty said that the state government will not act upon the decision in question as same had been withdrawn.

However, the bench granted liberty to the BTC to submit fresh applications seeking permission and said the state can consider the same in accordance with law.

C Gopal, a resident of Shanthi Nagar in city, who challenged the permission granted, said that the BTC was making all kinds of arrangements for online betting. "If at all online betting is permitted, many families will be on streets and same will affect many people, including youngsters," he claimed. As the government withdrew the permission, the bench disposed off the petition.

CENTRE PULLS UP STATE GOVT OVER WISTRON VIOLENCE

WISTRON Managing Director Sudipto Gupta added the firm is working closely with the State Government to ensure such incidents do not recur. The company will support the police investigations.

Even though Wistron slashed its loss estimates, experts say that the allegations of non-payment of dues/wages-reduction is a serious charges which may hurt Apple's brand image, resulting in temporary loss of contract. Apple is currently investigating whether Wistron was in violation of guidelines and has sent its staff and auditors to the site.

Wistron's loss may, be rival iPhone maker Foxconn and Pegatron's gain with a likelihood of the manufacturing base shifting to neighbouring Tamil Nadu. "Foxconn has a plant at Sriperumbudur whereas Pegatron will start its operations in 2022 for which Karnataka is a key contender. Pegatron has committed to invest $1 billion for its iPhone manufacturing in India. At this juncture, the onus will lie with the Karnataka Government as well as Wistron to preserve their image and not hurt the investment/expansion opportunities," sources privy to the matter said.

On Wednesday, the Department of Promotion of Industry and Internal Trade (DPIIT) pulled up the Karnataka Government yet again and asked it to expedite the inquiry into the Kolar plant violence and identify the culprits. Prior to this, senior officials from DPIIT, Niti Aayog and Karnataka Government participated in a virtual meeting to take stock of the ongoing investigations.

Even as the research firm Counterpoint predicted that Wistron's loss due to the violence and consequent shutdown of the facility will hit 8-10% of production and cause minimal damages to Apple's revenues, analysts say that a bigger concern will be the dent in reputation for the tech major.

"Apple's policies on labour are very strict and any observation of non-payment of dues to the workers may not be taken lightly. Although the Kolar facility is manufacturing the iPhone SE 2020 and older versions of the premium phone, the demand for iPhone 12 has peaked, so isn't really a matter of financial loss, but their brand value," Faisal Kawoosa, chief analyst and founder, TechArc, said.

Last month, Apple's second largest contract supplier Pegatron faced a probe by Apple in China after charges of employing students for night shifts and overwork, violating the tech giant's policies.

'India key to our global plans'

The Wistron facility was ransacked and damaged last weekend by some workers over a dispute on wages and overtime work. In the earlier complaint, (Crime: 281/2020) Prashant T D, the head of Administration for Wistron Infocomm Manufacturing India had claimed that the damage included cars and golf carts valued at ₹60,00,000, building infrastructure and services such as power, AC, building materials, glasses at ₹10,00,00,000, assembly production floor machinery and related equipment at approximately ₹4,12,50,00,000, new ATM machine at ₹40,00,000 and security equipment at ₹4,00,00,000 with a total approximate estimated loss of ₹437.70 crore. The police have so far registered four FIRs and arrested 158 people.

The State Government has assured the Taiwanese manufacturer a fair probe, action against those involved, support to restart the facility and timely redressal of "genuine" grievances of the workers.

"Wistron is a very important project and a flag-bearer of India's ambitions to become a global hub for electronics manufacturing. The state government is committed to its success and business continuity. Karnataka has always been a peaceful state and has been in the forefront in welcoming foreign investments," stated the letter, even as the government assured Wistron of safety and security of the project, employees and the property.

"It is our priority to restore investor confidence and want to assure Wistron that the plant is re-started at the earliest," said a senior bureaucrat.

"We are committed to make electronic manufacturing succeed in India, which is key to our global plans, and look to expand our presence in this very important market as we go forward," wrote Sudipto Gupta, MD, Innovation Business Group, Wistron Smart Devices. "We thank the state administration for their support," he added.

When food smells like sewage: A rare after-effect of Covid!

SUSHMITHA RAMAKRISHNAN @ Chennai

IMAGINE if lemons smell like petrol, or dosas like rotten cabbage! Twenty-five-year-old Sanjana (name changed), a doctor pursuing post graduation in general surgery, is living this nightmare. Even her favourite food items now smell like raw sewage. She was treated for Covid in August-September.

Like many others, she too suffered Anosmia – the loss of smell and taste. However, instead of recovering from it, she started experiencing a new one –Parosmia. This is a disorder that distorts smells, often making them unpleasant.

Experts say smell dysfunctions are common after-effects of viral illnesses. However, in Sanjana's case, the conditions persists a good three months after recovery, making her wonder if she will ever go back to enjoying her food again. "By the end of August, I lost my sense of smell and taste," she says.

For most people who develop Anosmia due to Covid, the symptoms persist for only about two weeks. But for me, it stayed for over six weeks.

NEED TO FIND QUICK RESOLUTION TO FARMERS' AGITATION

As the farmers' protest entered the 21st day on Wednesday, there appears to be no end to the deadlock over the new farm laws. Neither the government nor the farmers are ready to concede any ground on the core demand, that is the repeal of the laws. At the end of each day, all that both sides do is address each other through the media that they are ready for talks. In the meantime, the protest and road blockade are beginning to take a toll. There has been no toll collection in Punjab since October 1 as the farmers have opened the gates, resulting in an estimated loss of ₹3 crore daily to the National Highways Authority of India. Punjab itself is suffering, with Chief Minister Amarinder Singh saying the state could lose ₹40,000 crore in revenue. The security angle cannot be downplayed either as inimical forces can take advantage of the crisis.

Whether the new laws will benefit the farmers, free them from the yoke of middlemen or favour corporates is a matter of debate. But the agriculture sector is badly in need of an overhaul. The government is saddled with a burgeoning subsidy bill and a huge foodgrain surplus. The excess buffer stock either gets eaten by rats or rots in the rain. This cannot be exported either as international prices are far lower. From the farmers' perspective, income has remained stagnant, if not declined, as prices are no longer remunerative. Agriculture price fluctuation has only made things worse for them. The income gap between farmers and non-agricultural workers has also widened to over ₹1.5 lakh, making farming no longer an attractive job option. Many are flocking to cities in search of a livelihood, putting pressure on urban centres. So there is a crying need for structural reforms. Many governments, including those led by the Congress, have attempted to reform the sector. Several expert groups, too, have advocated change. Given this dire need, it is time to break the deadlock. The onus lies more on the Centre than the agitating farmers. Government representatives have often said they don't have any ego. Now is the time to show they really mean it.

WOMEN'S CRICKET TOO NEEDS NURTURING

The cricket calendar of the Indian men's team is packed till next year's T20 World Cup in November. After the tour of Australia, the team will welcome England. Then it will go to the UK. After coming back, it will look to win in the sport's shortest format in its own backyard. Considering that the 2021 edition of the IPL is sandwiched in the middle of all this, the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) has to be lauded for ensuring the men's team's blue-riband assignments have, by and large, remained unaffected even during the pandemic. Even the men's domestic season has been announced and Indian cricket board has shown intent to complete all fixtures involving men. But—there is always a but in this context—questions ought to be asked as to why the BCCI couldn't arrange similar international tours for the women's side. Sure, members of the national team did play their part in a week-long bash in the UAE last month, but in the long run, those kinds of matches seem glorified exhibitions.

You need continuity at the highest level, and the only way of ensuring that is to play matches against elite international opposition. The last ODI series Harmanpreet Kaur & Co. played was in November 2019. The last time the women's team played limited overs internationals was the T20 World Cup in Australia in March 2020. Since the time it played an international match, Pakistan, England, South Africa, New Zealand and Australia have all played ODIs. Amid the pandemic, Australia and New Zealand have already played a series. Pakistan and South Africa are going to play one early next year. The India team? As it stands, their next confirmed outing is going to be the World Cup in 2022.

It's not a good look that the world's richest cricketing body is unable to arrange an international series for the women, especially when the players have shown they can mix and match with the best, reaching the World Cup finals in both formats. With exciting players coming up—Shafali Verma, Jemimah Rodrigues and Smriti Mandhana to name a few—the BCCI would do well to start treating both the teams equally. Otherwise, the new-found groundswell of support and interest surrounding the women's team may disappear again.

Marx presents, in the space of a couple of short paragraphs, an examination of religion that is surpassed by little else before or after him

WHAT KARL MARX DID SAY ABOUT RELIGION

AMIT BANDRE

PAUL ZACHARIA

Award-winning fiction writer

It's a fact that no one reads Karl Marx, except a few determined souls. Most people go by hearsay. The reason is simple: You can't read him for fun; he is demanding. One of the most circulated hearsays about Marx is what he said about religion. His extraordinary, original vision of man's helpless entrapment in religion has been reduced by opponents and proponents both into the one short, shabby cliché: "religion is the opium of the people". When Marx wrote the introduction to A Critique of Hegel's Philosophy of Right in 1843—the year of his marriage to Jenny von Westphalen—he was 25, a young man impatient with the philosophies and politics of his times. It is in this work of hardcore, abstruse polemics—unpublished during his lifetime—that Marx presents, in the space of a couple of short paragraphs, an examination of religion that is surpassed by little else before or after him. It is also the translation of Marx's text by Joseph O'Malley, the most profoundly poetic vision of all his massive body of work—except the few lyrical flights in the Communist Manifesto.

References to religion are so scant in the pages of his theoretical work that it seems he accorded no importance to it except in its role as a lackey of the oppressor and a deluder of the oppressed. About Christianity, the then dominant religion of Europe, he said: "The social principles of Christianity declare all the vile acts of the oppressors to be either a just punishment for original sin and other sins, or trials which the Lord, in his infinite wisdom, ordains for the redeemed." True, the Marxian scenario of a proletarian revolution did not play out in Europe. Instead it was a bourgeoisie-driven capitalist upsurge that created Europe's economic (read colonial) domination of the world—as also its post-Second World War democracies. The often neglected fact is that the grassroots energy that spurred this transformation was the boundless power released by the secular deconstruction of Christianity that set millions of minds free. European societies who chose to get rid of the religious delusion, to firmly separate state from religion and governance from faith, raced to the top of the ladder of material and cultural progress.

The portrait of religion unfurled by Marx in the introduction to his critique of Hegel is nothing less than stunning. He does it with a deft and sure hand, with bold, broad sweeps. It takes him only a few sentences to create this definitive summary of man's religious reality. After a quick reference to the situation of religion in Germany, he declares: "...the criticism of religion is the prerequisite of all criticism". Religion disappoints because it offers man only a heavenly reflection of himself, not his true reality. He states: "The foundation of irreligious criticism is: man makes religion, religion does not make man." Because, "religion is the self-consciousness and self-esteem of man who has either not yet won through to himself, or has already lost himself again." Religion is an alter ego created by man.

"Man," he clarifies, "is no abstract being squatting outside the world. Man is the world of man—state, society. This state and this society produce religion, which is an inverted consciousness of the world, because they are an inverted world." It is the topsy-turvy world of the state and society that creates religion and its topsy-turvy world view. "Religion," he continues, "is the general theory of this world, its encyclopaedic compendium, its logic in popular form, its spiritual point d'honneur, its enthusiasm, its solemn compliment, and its universal basis of consolation and justification." It is, he says, a fantastic realisation of the human essence in place of a true realisation.

Marx argues that religion is like a chain of imaginary flowers man wears. Criticism plucks away those flowers and enables man to throw off the chain and pluck the living flower

The struggle against religion therefore is a struggle against a world whose spirit is consumed by religion. But there's a contradiction because religious suffering is the expression of real suffering and at the same time a protest against suffering. Now, in a few—startlingly moving—words, Marx goes to the heart of the matter. "Religion is the sigh of the oppressed creature, the heart of a heartless world, and the soul of soulless conditions. It is the opium of the people." Religion, he continues, therefore is the illusory happiness of the people. To ask them to give up the illusion is to ask them to give up the condition that requires illusions. It is asking them, in effect, to change the conditions that addicts them to the opium that is religion. "The criticism of religion is, therefore," he writes, "the embryonic criticism of this vale of tears of which religion is the halo."

He argues that religion is like a chain of imaginary flowers man wears. Criticism plucks away those flowers and enables man to throw off the chain and pluck the living flower. It empowers him to discard his illusions and regain his senses "so that he will move around himself as his own Sun. Religion is only the illusory Sun which revolves around man as long as he does not revolve around himself".

He continues with a statement that is dazzling in its unerring understanding of the primary tasks of history and philosophy. "It is therefore, the task of history," Marx writes, "once the other-world of truth has vanished, to establish the truth of this world. It is the immediate task of philosophy, which is in the service of history, to unmask self-estrangement in its unholy forms once the holy form of self-estrangement has been unmasked." History and philosophy must help people behold the truth about the real world they live in and to recognise their true alienation, which is of this world and not of an illusory heaven.

"Thus," Marx concludes, "the criticism of Heaven turns into the criticism of Earth, the criticism of religion into the criticism of law, and the criticism of theology into the criticism of politics." One wonders if this young 25-year-old knew he had uttered the last word on the charade that religion and politics, masquerading as each other, use to enslave nations.

HEALTHCARE: CHASING THE DANGEROUS UNREALITY

SATYA MOHANTY

Former Secretary, Government of India

When you start lending the importance of first-order criticality to things that at best are of second order, you run the risk of dallying with dangerous unreality. This unreality can tempt you into seductive ideas and take your attention away from the pressing must-dos. When we address the faux questions and if action follows the ideation, the welfare of the common man is the first casualty. When the thought process of planners is around fragmented delivery of healthcare services, multiplicity of purchasing platforms, non-pooling of the risk equilibrium and interoperability of health records, it misses the basic points. That 90% of rural people go to untrained Rural Medical Practitioner (RMP) doctors, the broken primary healthcare system does not even have nurses at the stipulated standard, and there are many vacancies of doctors at the Primary Health Centre (PHC) level and specialists at the Community Health Centre (CHC) level.

In India, there is a negative Pearson correlation between nurses and doctors. The states routinely have vacancies and are reluctant to appoint doctors and nurses, and the budget for primary healthcare remains abysmally low. This is at variance from the experience in other places where public healthcare accounts for 50% of the total health expenditure.

The public health system is broken with years of underinvestment, non-positioning of personnel, poor supervision, poor medical infrastructure and rent-seeking behaviour. There is a skewed distribution of medical personnel too with the 70% of the population in our rural areas getting poor coverage.

With such scarcity of trained manpower, that an intermediate degree for practising a limited range of healthcare has not been introduced will surprise us all. Before Independence, we had Licensed Medical Practitioners (LMPs) with three-year diplomas and when many other countries adopted that, we abandoned it. The LMPs with intermediate qualification in public health and medicine will be appropriate for sub-centres. And why are trained nurses not entitled to practise independently though they really manage our understaffed primary health with absentee doctors? Trained nurses are more amenable to work in rural areas but they do not get appointed. And the distribution of nurses is most skewed in north India where health outcomes are the worst. When doctors are reluctant to work in rural areas, why are they blessed with a protective ring that helps in driving up their wages in the absence of supply side response?

Instead of stabilising and augmenting public healthcare, the governments plan and work around corporate hospitals. In accepting the impossibility of boot-strapping public healthcare institutions, we are choosing the wrong pathway. Covid has proved that private corporate hospitals are not the right approach for India, where nearly 80% of the households are poor and financially stretched.

First of all, augmenting resources for public healthcare is not impossible. Is it so difficult to find an extra 1% of GDP for health if ₹1.5 lakh crore of corporate tax can be foregone in the blink of an eye? Surely between the states and Centre, it is possible if conviction and willingness to prioritise it are there.

Instead of stabilising and augmenting public healthcare, especially in rural areas, the governments plan around corporate hospitals. Covid has again shown that free market orthodoxy is not the right approach for India

Only 18.8% of rural doctors have a medical qualification. We need to expand the number of MBBS doctors and trained nurses for the system, particularly in PHCs and CHCs. The shortfall in trained nurses in the "high focus states" ranges between 65% to 95%. Incidentally, these states also do not have an adequate number of nursing training colleges. Moreover, we are losing graduates from public medical colleges to the private sector. The number of seats can be ramped up without much expansion of the already existing infra. Students of the public system should say if they will be opting for service in the public system for 15 years at the time of joining. In that event, the fees should be zero, otherwise it should be comparable to the average of the private system, which is ₹50 lakh per student. During the 15 years they serve in the public system, they should be allowed two years of study leave at government cost to do specialisation. This incentive will be a great differentiator. The intermediate level health practitioners should be offered a hospital management course of one year after 10 years to be upgraded to hospitals at higher levels.

Finally, the ecosystem in public hospitals is terrible to say the least. The burgeoning population has exacerbated the problem. But the ecosystem in the government is such that the lower down you are, the more likely it is to get political power. A doctor does not control the support staff in the hospital and everyone is a power centre in that ecosystem. It could be because of their poor HR skills as well as the enveloping political system. They are dependent on the government budget as a lifeline and politicians have disproportionate control, both formal and informal, over the system. Hospitals above the PHC level should be cost and responsibility centres where the director and the personnel should be responsible for everything they do. Oversight will be done by a board of governors consisting of representatives from the government health department and local users. Politicians should only participate at the board level. Even the usable costs can be collected from the patients. But the flow of the budget should be non-obstructive. These are the answers the country should be seeking rather than reposing faith in the private sector entirely or privatising or corporatising healthcare facilities by questionable carpet bombing.

For an improved healthcare, we need not work with free market orthodoxy or with yesterday's logic. Nor should we consider the improvement of our public health system as an impossibility. As Nelson Mandela said, the only impossible journey is the one we never took.

Not good for democracy

The Centre scrapping the Winter Session of Parliament citing Covid-19 without building consensus among parties is not a good sign for the country's democracy. With the farmer agitations as the backdrop, one expects the Centre to advance the session for a full-fledged debate on the laws.

SK Choudhury, Bengaluru

Talk to the farmers

Instead of making political speeches, Prime Minister Narendra Modi must talk to the farmers about the benefits of the laws to end the agitation immediately. (Plot to confuse farmers on three laws, says Modi, Dec 16.) One of the two parties must soften its stance for a solution.

O Prasada Rao, Hyderabad

No citizen is an outsider

West Bengal CM Mamata Banerjee comparing BJP leaders to the dacoits of Chambal is nonsensical. It shows how much she respects constitutional ethics and norms. Calling them outsiders is also not right. She must realise that no Indian citizen is an outsider in any state.

Jitendranath Guru, Padampur

Just a promotional stunt

Creating controversy over a to-be-published book has become a promotional stunt adopted by publishers. The spat over former President late Pranab Mukherjee's memoir The Presidential Years seems to be nothing but a business trick to garner more eyeballs towards the book.

A Raveendranath, Aranmula

Leading despite the scams

The LDF's lead in the Kerala civic body polls is indeed highly surprising due to the various scams and corruption charges against it. But the ruling government's performance in managing the pandemic and the attention given to the development sector seem to have worked in its favour.

B Veerakumaran Thampi, Pattom

Oppn criticism didn't work

The early results of the Kerala civic polls suggest the voters expect a peaceful livelihood more than anything else. The constant criticism of the opposition against the LDF on issues like the Sprinklr deal and gold smuggling appear to have had little credence.

Sanath Kumar T S, Thrissur

Need efficient cold chains

This is with reference to Covid vaccines: The complex task ahead (Dec 16). While many vaccines have been cleared for emergency use, none of them are backed by large trials. The greatest challenge in India will be that of efficient cold chains.

Dr George Jacob, Kochi

Lessons from the past?

This is with reference to For the residents of God's own land (Dec 16). It was interesting to read about land encroachment cases and how they were resolved in earlier days. But the author's hope for those to be taken as guides for cases in the present is sadly misplaced. People still had some respect for temples back then.

Lakshmi Vijaya, Bengaluru

Increase Budget for health

This is with reference to Combating scourge of malnutrition in India (Dec 16). It is shocking that a lot of children have died due to malnutrition. Increasing the budgetary allocation for healthcare programmes and implementing them with proper feedback can help prevent malnutrition.

N R Nagarajan, Sivakasi

Must incentivise EVs

This is with reference to Ola's ambitious initiative in electric vehicle sector (Dec 16). The editorial rightly highlights the need to incentivise the production and adoption of EVs. Affordable costs with proper infrastructure in place will certainly help.

'Farm laws India's internal matter, but protests an issue'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @New Delhi

BRITISH Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab discussed the ongoing farmers' protests at Delhi's borders with External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar during their interaction on Wednesday.

India had a vibrant heritage of peaceful protests, and the UK respects it, he told the media after the meeting.

"I discussed the situation with foreign minister Jaishankar and obviously, we respect the fact that the reforms going through your system here are domestic reforms," Raab told reporters. "Of course, they have elicited the protests that you refer to, and your politics – in some sense – because of the Indian diaspora in Britain, is our politics. But I think, India, as well as having a market-driven economy, also has a vibrant heritage of peaceful protests and vigorous debate, and we watch that with interest and we respect it."

Earlier, British MPs, including those of Indian origin, had raised the issue of farmers protest in the UK parliament. Thirty-six British MPs had also written to Raab to raise the issue of protests with the Indian government during his three-day tour to the country.

Raab also called on Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Wednesday during which they discussed the potential of the relationship between India and UK in a post-COVID and post-Brexit era.

"The UK is committed to building a closer relationship with India. I met @narendramodi today to discuss our joint vision, a 10-year roadmap to create jobs for Britons and Indians, defined our security and work together as a force for good in the Indo-Pacific," Raab tweeted. Experts from both countrieswill join forces through a new virtual hub to deliver vaccines, he added.

'SC'S PANEL PROPOSAL IS MORAL VICTORY'

The All India Kisan Sangharsh Coordination Committee said that the Supreme Court proposal asking the government to form a committee and include representatives of both the Centre and the farmer unions, is a "moral victory" for the agitating farmers, adding that the agitation will continue till the three farm laws are repealed. It criticised PM Narendra Modi for claiming that farmers were being fooled by the opposition, saying it is "he who is fooling them".

V-P HOPES REASONABLE SOLUTION TO ISSUES

Vice-President M Venkaiah Naidu expressed hope that an "early and reasonable solution" will be found on the issues raised by the agitating farmers. At an awards ceremony jointly organised by the Rythu Nestham and Muppavarapu Foundation in Hyderabad, Naidu referred to the media reports on the demands of the agitating farmers and the response of the representatives of the Central government, and added that he saw a possibility of a certain meeting ground.

'MODI GOVT HAS CROSSED LIMITS OF BRUTALITY'

The Congress attacked the government after a Sikh preacher, who was supporting the farmers' stir against the farm laws, allegedly committed suicide near the Singhu border. Congress leader Rahul Gandhi said the Modi government should quit its "stubbornness" and withdraw the laws. "Many farmers have sacrificed their lives. The brutality of the Modi government has crossed all limits. Quit stubbornness and immediately withdraw the anti-agricultural law," he tweeted in Hindi.

The ongoing protest is an exception and the agitation is limited to one state. We are holding discussions and talks

SWEET CANE SUBSIDY IN SEASON OF FARMER STIR

Centre approves a subsidy of ₹3,500 crore for export of 60 lakh tonnes of sugar and the amount will be directly transferred to the farmers, says Union minister

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @New Delhi

AMID the ongoing farmer agitation, the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs (CCEA) on Wednesday approved a ₹3,500-crore subsidy for sugarcane cultivators and sugar mills. "The Cabinet has taken the decision to help the farmers directly by depositing the subsidy amount into their accounts. The subsidy will be given on 60 lakh tonnes of sugar exports at the rate of ₹6,000 per tonne," Union minister Prakash Javadekar told reporters after the Cabinet meeting.

The government claimed the move will benefit 5 crore sugarcane farmers as well as five lakh workers employed in the sugar mills.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi and several BJP leaders hailed the decision in a clear indication that the government hoped to appease the farmers through the decision. Modi called it a day of "special joy" for crores of farmers.

This subsidy aims at covering expenses on marketing, handling, upgrading and other processing costs and costs of international and internal transport and freight charges on export of up to 60 LMT of sugar limited to Maximum Admissible Export Quota allocated to sugar mills for sugar season 2020-21.

"Farmers sell their sugarcane to the sugar mills. However, the farmers are not getting their dues from the sugar mill owners as they have surplus stock. To address this concern, the government is facilitating the evacuation of surplus sugar stock. This will enable payment of dues of the sugarcane farmers," the CCEA said in a statement. "The government will incur about ₹3,500 crore for this purpose, and this assistance would be directly credited into farmers' accounts on behalf of sugar mills against cane price dues and subsequent balance, if any, would be credited to the mill's account."

The move is aimed at appeasing sugarcane growers of western Uttar Pradesh. Farmers of northern India, mainly from Punjab, Haryana and western UP, have been protesting at the Delhi borders seeking repeal of the agri laws.

Punjab unit warns BJP brass of party losing battle of perception

HARPREET BAJWA @Chandigarh

THE Punjab BJP has told the central leadership that the deadlock over farmers' protest should be resolved quickly as the people's perception about the saffron party has grown negative.

A delegation of Punjab BJP leaders, led by state unit chief Ashwani Sharma, recently met Union ministers Amit Shah, Rajnath Singh, Narendra Singh Tomar and Piyush Goyal. The Punjab leaders were of the opinion that the party is being seen as an "enemy" of the people in the state, where Assembly polls are due in early 2022.

The state BJP's unease comes in the wake of the party's plan to expand its base and go it alone in the Assembly polls following its break-up with the Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD).

"The farmers' agitation and the government's firm refusal to withdraw the three farm laws have made a major dent in the prospects of the BJP which is fast losing the perception battle among the Sikhs in rural as well as urban areas," said a senior party leader.

Farmer union leaders are sitting outside the houses of many BJP leaders for the last two months. Sharma's car was attacked near Hoshiarpur.

"We recently met the Union ministers and shared with them the feedback that we had and requested them to find a solution to the farmers' stir as soon as possible. We have been in constant touch with the farmer leaders and have ensured the negotiation took place between them and the government," said Sharma. "The government is ready to further talk to them if they have more doubts."

He also pointed at attempts being made to flame communal passions. It is also learnt that discussions were held on the role of some Punjabi singers.

BJP national general secretary Tarun Chugh said the party has always stood for Hindu-Sikh unity. "All Punjabis should wake up to the nefarious designs of former CM and SAD chief Sukhbir Badal. Why is Sukhbir silent in the face of communally sensitive songs being sung by some state singers?" he asked.

Tomar takes swipe at Punjab tillers, Scindia says Congress can't be the lone flagbearer

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bhopal

IN a show of strength through *Kisan Sammelan*s for the second day in Madhya Pradesh, Union Agriculture Minister Narendra Singh Tomar and BJP Rajya Sabha MP Jyotiraditya Scindia addressed a rally in Gwalior while another rally was held by oil minister Dharmendra Pradhan in Indore.

On Tuesday, similar rallies were organised by the BJP in Ujjain and Bhopal, which were addressed by Chief Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan.

At the rally in Gwalior, Tomar accused the Congress and the Left parties of misleading the farmers to further their agenda of opposition to every policy of the Modi government. "Let me make it clear that we can bow our heads before the farmers, but will deal firmly with those having vested interests, who are using farmers just to train guns at our government," he said. "Not all farmers, but those driven by vested interests in one state are against the new laws..."

"Go to every village and organise chaupals to end the false propaganda on the new farm laws," Tomar urged the gathering.

Scindia lashed out at the Congress, questioning why it was opposing the same farm laws which it had promised in the 2019 Lok Sabha polls manifesto. "Why did the Kamal Nath government fail to lower the mandi tax in 15 months in MP?"

"Does the Congress consider itself perpetual flag bearers of farmers? It will not be allowed to happen anymore. The BJP will work for farmers religiously," Scindia said.

'Why waste time on uniform of forces?'

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @New Delhi

CONGRESS leader Rahul Gandhi and two other party MPs walked out of a meeting of the Parliamentary Committee on Defence on Wednesday, alleging that the panel's time was being wasted in discussing uniform of armed forces instead of the crucial issue of national security at border.

Chaired by BJP MP Jual Oram, the meeting was discussing the issue of new uniforms of the Army, Navy and Air Force in the presence of the Chief of Defence Staff General Bipin Rawat when Rahul intervened that the issue be left to the forces and that the political leadership should discuss on equipping forces better to fight the Chinese at Ladakh.

The former Congress chief kept questioning why General Rawat had to listen to politicians on uniforms in the meeting. "The leadership should also focus on how to push back the enemy and support and strengthen the armed forces rather than dictating the colour of their uniforms," he is said to have told the panel.

Sources said this happened when a presentation was being given on military service branches in the US and other countries having uniforms that made it easy to distinguish various ranks. A BJP MP at the meeting seemingly suggested similar uniform in all three forces to avoid confusion.

According to sources, Oram did not allow Rahul to speak on the matter after which he walked out along with Congress MPs Rajeev Satav and Revanth Reddy.

Parl panel grills FB India head on Bajrang Dal

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @New Delhi

FACEBOOK India head Ajit Mohan deposed before a parliamentary panel on Wednesday in connection with a media report that the social media platform was reluctant to ban the Bajrang Dal over concerns of its staff's security.

In its report, the Wall Street Journal suggested that despite an internal assessment calling for a ban on the Bajrang Dal, Facebook has not cracked down on the outfit due to financial considerations apart from concerns over the safety of its employees.

Mohan was accompanied by Facebook's public policy director Shivnath Thukral while deposing before the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Information Technology, which was chaired by Congress leader Shashi Tharoor.

Besides Tharoor, Congress MP Karti Chidambaram grilled Mohan on the WSJ report which had suggested that despite an internal assessment calling for a ban on the Bajrang Dal, the social media giant had not cracked down on the group because of financial considerations and safety concerns of its employees.

Mohan is said to have told the parliamentary panel at the meeting that Facebook's fact-checking team had not found any content that necessitated a ban on the Bajrang Dal.

India slips in human development index, gets tagged with Pak, B'desh

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @New Delhi

INDIA is ranked 131 of 189 countries on the Human Development Index (HDI), two places below from last year, according to a report released by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

By adjusting its HDI to include two more factors of carbon dioxide emissions and material footprint, the Human Development Report (HDR) 2020 shows how the global development landscape would change if both the well- being of people and also the planet were made central to defining humanity's progress.

Norway topped the index, followed by Ireland, Switzerland, Hong Kong and Iceland making to the top five in the list. Among Asian countries, Singapore was ranked (11), Saudi Arabia (40) and Malaysia (62) with "very high human development" followed by Sri Lanka (72), Thailand (79) and China (85) were tagged as "high human development" countries.

India, Bhutan, Bangladesh, Myanmar, Nepal, Cambodia, Kenya, and Pakistan were ranked under countries with medium human development. India's Gross National Income (GNI) per capita fell to $6,681 in 2019 from $6,829 in 2018 on PPP basis, it said.

"India's HDI value for 2019 is 0.645, which put the country in the medium human development category. Between 1990 and 2019, India's HDI value increased from 0.429 to 0.645, an increase of 50.3 percent," the report said.

UNDP resident representative Shoko Noda said the drop in India's ranking doesn't mean "India didn't do well but other countries did better." "India can help other countries too and lauded its commitment to reduce carbon emissions.''

The 30th anniversary edition of UNDP's Human Development Report, includes a new experimental index that takes into account countries' carbon dioxide emissions and material footprint. Countries must redesign their development pathways to reduce damage to the environment and the natural world, or risk stalling progress for humanity overall, the report warned.

'Modi played crucial role in felling Kamal Nath govt'

BHOPAL: Prime Minister Narendra Modi played an important role in the fall of Kamal Nath-led Congress government in Madhya Pradesh in March, BJP national general secretary Kailash Vijayvargiya said on Wednesday.

Vijayvargiya made the disclosure while addressing the BJP's Kisan Sammelan in Indore. "Aap kisi ko batana mat, maine aaj tak kisi ko nahi bataayee. Pahli baar is manch se bata raha hoon, ki Kamal Nathji ki sarkar girane mein yadi mahatvpoorna bhumika kisiki thee toh Narendra Modiji ki thee, Dharmendra Pradhanji ki nahi. (Don't tell anyone, I haven't told this to anyone till now. I'm making it public for the first time from this stage. If anyone played an important role in pulling down the Kamal Nath government, it was Narendra Modi and not Dharmendra Pradhan," said Vijayvargiya from the stage where Union minister Dharmendra Pradhan and MP home minister Narottam Mishra were also present.

The Congress was quick to capitalise on the remark. "It's crystal clear now that its PM Modi who pulls down constitutionally elected governments in unconstitutional manner. Congress has been saying it right since day one, but the BJP has been blaming the Congress's internal tussle for the fall of the Kamal Nath government," Congress spokesperson Narendra Saluja tweeted with the video of Vijayvargiya's disclosure.

In June, CM Shivraj Singh Chouhan reportedly told BJP workers in Indore that it was the BJP's central leadership which had decided the fall of the Congress government. An audio clip of Chouhan's address had gone viral. ENS

Bombay HC stays transfer of salt pan land for metro shed

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Mumbai

A division bench of the Bombay High Court on Wednesday stayed an order passed by Mumbai suburban district collector allotting 102 acre of salt pan land in city's Kanjurmarg area for the construction of an integrated Metro car shed. The bench also restrained the authorities from carrying out any construction work at the land. The Central government and the Shiv Sena-led state government are locked in a dispute over ownership of the land earmarked by the state for constructing the car shed which was earlier planned at Aarey Colony, a green belt in Goregaon. The Centre has filed a plea in the High Court challenging the order passed by the collector, and said the land belongs to its salt department. "We cannot allow the collector's order to continue. The order has to go. We are admitting the petition and granting relief as sought by the petitioner (Union government)," the court said. Meanwhile, Maharashtra Deputy CM Ajit Pawar has indicated that his government may approach the Supreme Court against the HC order.

Suvendu quits as MLA, to meet BJP brass

Chances high that several elected representatives and district-level functionaries would desert the ruling party

PRANAB MONDAL @ Kolkata

ONCE a trusted lieutenant of Mamata Banerjee, Trinamool Congress strongman Suvendu Adhikari on Wednesday resigned as party MLA amid buzz that he is all set to join the BJP. Adhikari submitted his resignation to the assembly secretary around 4 pm. Sources said he will fly to Delhi on Thursday to meet the BJP national leadership. The party's national vice president Mukul Roy said Adhikari was a leader of mass movement.

Adhikari's move has triggered another slugfest between the state government and the ruling party on one hand and the Centre and the BJP, on the other. "Suvendu's resignation is not being accepted because the secretary has no authority to accept resignation letter of an MLA," Assembly Speaker Biman Banerjee said.

Governor Jagdeep Dhankhar, however, tweeted, "Suvendu Adhikari, former minister, has by way of representation sought my intervention so that police and administration are dissuaded from implicating him and his associates in criminal cases out of political vendetta. Taking expected steps."

Terming the rebel leader as a traitor, TMC MP and spokesperson Saugata Roy said, "During our last conversation, he told me that all issues would be sorted out. I don't know the deal between the BJP and him."

Adhikari's move appears to have rattled the TMC as he enjoys significant influence in East Midnapore and his exit could set off a series of desertions. A number of disgruntled district-level functionaries and elected representatives of the ruling party have started expressing their dissent. There is also a lot of resentment among these leaders over election strategist Prashant Kishor and his team issuing directions to them.

Late on Wednesday evening, Adhikari held a closed door meeting with some of the disgruntled leaders, including Sunil Mandal, MP from East Burdwan, and Jitendra Tiwari, MLA and district TMC president.

Mandal earlier alleged that the party was being run by "corrupt leaders and extortionists".

Owaisi scouts in UP to stitch alliance with small parties

NAMITA BAJPAI @ Lucknow

BUOYED by a credit-worthy debut performance in Bihar polls, All India Majlis-e-Ittehadul-Muslimeen (AIMIM) chief Assaduddin Owaisi has turned to Uttar Pradesh looking for alliances with smaller parties for 2022 Assembly polls. In Bihar, the AIMIM had won five seats. Owaisi met Suheldev Bharatiya Samaj Party (SBSP) chief Om Prakash Rajbhar, a former BJP ally, in Lucknow on Wednesday. It's not the first time that Owaisi's party is looking to break fresh ground in UP; he has fielded candidates in the last few elections.

"Our performance in Bihar has given us a lot of confidence. We have to continue that momentum," Owaisi said while interacting with the media persons. Rajbhar said, "It has been decided after my meeting with Owaisi that SBSP and AIMIM would contest the 2022 Assembly elections together." He said until recently some people thought Rajbhar was all by himself, unable to help others. "Now, Owaisiji has come; we will show our power to the heavyweights."

Referring to the Bhaagidaari Sankalp Morcha, a front of smaller parties formed in the state last year, Rajbhar said: "The Morcha will contest the UP polls together. More outfits are ready to join us." On a question about AIMIM being called a vote-splitter, Rajbhar said: "We want that (division of votes) to happen. Let Owaisi ji split the votes of his community…Rajbhar would split those of his, and Krishna Patel (of Apna Dal) of her community. Let these all votes get accumulated to ensure our victory." Attributing a part of his success to Rajbhar, Owaisi, whose party performed well in Bihar, said: "Rajbhar ji too has a role in the success. We are part of the Grand Democratic Secular Alliance."

AAP's entry may hurt regional parties more than BJP

NAMITA BAJPAI @ Lucknow

THE Aam Aadmi Party will contest all 403 Assembly seats, besides panchayat polls, in Uttar Pradesh, lending one more dimension to the traditional four-way contests involving the SP, BSP, Congress and the BJP in the state.

Though the Assembly polls are 14 months away, observers say Delhi CM and AAP convener Arvind Kejriwal will have to be ready for a scenario in which his party's entry would hurt the other players more than the ruling BJP.

"AAP leader Sanjay Singh has been working to make some inroads into UP. However, the AAP leadership should realise that people in the state have an altogether different political temperament and the ground situation varies from one district to another," says AK Mishra, political scientist at Lucknow University.

"In Delhi, AAP faces challenge only from the Congress and BJP. But in UP, it will be up against regional powers such as the SP and BSP which have their own vote banks. The recent by-elections have shown there is no anti-incumbency against the Yogi government," says political analyst Gyanendra Sharma.

Ahead of the 2022 Assembly polls, UP will witness local body elections next year. The AAP's decision to contest the panchayat polls will test its acceptability in the Hindi heartland. The party had contested the 2019 Lok Sabha polls in UP but had failed to register its presence.

An AAP office-bearer said the party is working to build a cadre base right from the block levels to Assembly constituencies, with its focus on hard-selling the healthcare and education models of the Delhi government which it claims to be a success.

PM to attend Aligarh varsity programme

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Lucknow

PRIME MINISTER Narendra Modi will be the chief guest at the Aligarh Muslim University's centenary celebrations on December 22, said an official statement from the university on Wednesday. The PM would attend the virtual function along with Union Education Minister Ramesh Pokhriyal Nishank.

Extending his gratitude to the PM, AMU Vice-Chancellor Professor Tariq Mansoor said the AMU community was thankful to the PM for his acceptance to participate in the celebrations marking 100 years of the university.

The acceptance of invite for centenary celebrations by PM Modi assumes significance as AMU has been the hub of protests and the varsity students have been quite vocal against majority of decisions taken by the Modi government.

However, the AMU Students Union (AMUSU) adopted a guarded silence on the invite extended by the AMU authorities to the PM and his acceptance of it. While talking to this correspondent, AMUSU president Salman Imtiyaz claimed that the union would make its stand clear over invitation to PM Modi by releasing an official statement on Thursday.

Meanwhile, the V-C has appealed to all to "keep the programme above politics".

Europe tightens lockdown amid fears of Christmas virus surge

Coronavirus renews onslaught on EU countries; Germany reports record toll of 952; Spanish PM sounds alarm on burgeoning caseload; US sees 2.5L infections

BERLIN

SEVERAL European countries tightened restrictions on Wednesday, as Germany set a record for daily deaths and the US broke its own daily high for infection numbers.

The tougher measures came as EU countries agreed to roll-out vaccinations on the same day. "To get to the end of the pandemic, we will need up to 70% of the population vaccinated," European Commission chief Ursula von der Leyen told MEPs.

Pressure has been mounting on the bloc since Britain and the United States both started their programmes, using a vaccine developed in the EU by Pfizer and BioNTech.

The World Health Organization's European wing on Wednesday warned of a resurgence of the virus on the continent early next year, urging special precautions over the holiday season.

Shocking German fatalities

"It may feel awkward to wear masks and practise physical distancing when around friends and family, but doing so contributes significantly to ensuring that everyone remains safe and healthy," the health agency said.

Germany, which dealt with its first wave relatively smoothly, closed non-essential shops and schools on Wednesday as its daily death toll soared to 952. The country has struggled to contain a surge in recent months and has joined calls for the European Union's health regulator to approve the Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine "before Christmas".

people in Britain have received a first dose of the Pfizer-BioNTech Covid vaccine since inoculations began on Dec 8. The country's prime minister on on Wednesday resisted calls to tighten virus restrictions over Christmas, as London faced stricter measures and concern mounted over rising cases. Boris Johnson said it was up to individuals to be responsible

China is also looking to stock up on the Pfizer vaccine with one company agreeing to buy 100 million doses subject to local approval -- the country is mixing its vaccination strategy between locally developed drugs and imported ones.

In Britain, pubs, bars, restaurants and other hospitality sites will close, as will theatres and other entertainment venues. "The hospitality business needs this week, and it's devastating. It is devastatingly awful," said Lesley Lewis, owner of The French House, a London pub. "But if this is what it takes to save lives, that's what we have to do."

Denmark, France, Turkey and the Netherlands have all tightened their restrictions and Spain's PM expressed alarm at rising case numbers there.

The US remains the hardest-hit nation, setting a record for new daily infections on Tuesday with more than 248,000 cases. The Washington National Cathedral rang its bells 300 times Tuesday in memory of the more than 300,000 people who have lost their lives to coronavirus.

In California, officials ordered 5,000 extra body bags as Los Angeles was left with fewer than 100 available ICU beds for a county of 10 million. AFP

US adds India to watch list on currency manipulation

WASHINGTON

THE US Treasury Department has branded Vietnam and Switzerland as currency manipulators while putting India and nine other countries on a watch list in an annual report designed to halt countries from manipulating their currencies to gain unfair trade advantages.

It marked the first time that the United States has labeled another country as a currency manipulator since August 2019 when it called out China at a time when the world's two largest economies were locked in tense trade negotiations.

The Trump administration removed the designation from China in January after the two nations had achieved trade agreements aimed at lowering China's massive bilateral trade surplus with the United States.

The Treasury report said that Vietnam and Switzerland were the only two countries that met all three criteria for being named a currency manipulator. The designation will trigger special negotiations over the next year, and if they are not successful in resolving the issue, the United States can move forward to impose economic sanctions on Vietnam and Switzerland.

In addition to China, the other countries put on a monitoring list were Japan, South Korea, Germany, Italy, Singapore, Malaysia, Taiwan, Thailand and India. Taiwan, Thailand and India were put on the watch list this year while the other countries were already on the watch list issued with the last report in Jan. AP

Trump supporters grudgingly accept Biden poll victory

WASHINGTON

ROBERT REED says he will always believe the 2020 election was stolen from President Donald Trump. Reed, a retired police officer-turned-construction worker, believes fraud marred the vote, no matter how many courts rejected that claim. Still, a day after the Electoral College made Joe Biden's win official, the ardent Trump supporter from the suburbs of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, was ready to move on.

"I think it's pretty much over," Reed said of Trump's ongoing quest to overturn the results of the election. "I trust the Electoral College."

For weeks, Trump has been on a mission to convince his loyal base that his victory was stolen and the contest was rigged. With help from conservative media, polls show he's had considerable success. But now that the Electoral College has formalized Biden's win and Republican officials, including Senate Leader Mitch McConnell, are finally acknowledging Biden as president-elect, many Trump voters across the US seem to be doing the same.

Interviews with voters, along with fresh surveys of Republicans, suggest their unfounded doubts about the integrity of the vote remain. But there is far less consensus on what should be done about it and whether to carry that resentment forward.

For some, like Reed, the Electoral College vote was the clear end of a process. Others have vowed to continue to protest with demonstrations like the one that turned violent in Washington, DC, over the weekend. And some said they hoped GOP leaders would press for more investigations to put the doubts Trump sowed to rest.

They are people like Scott Adams, a retiree and Trump voter living in Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, who said he accepts Biden's victory — but "with reservations." Adams said he's heard too much discussion about irregularities in votes on Fox News. AP

Bitcoin crosses $20K for 1st time in meteoric rise

NEW YORK

LEADING virtual currency bitcoin on Wednesday traded above $20,000 for the first time following a sustained run higher in recent weeks.

Just 12 years old, bitcoin reached a record-high $20,398.50 before pulling back to $20,145, which was still an intra-day gain of nearly 4%.

It has seen a meteoric rise since March, when it stood at $5,000, spurred by online payments giant PayPal saying it would enable account holders to use cryptocurrency.

A number of central banks have meanwhile responded to the rise of cryptocurrencies and the dwindling global use of cash by announcing plans for bank-backed digital units.

Several central banks including those of China and Sweden – but also the US Federal Reserve -- are also testing digital applications in response to Facebook's recent moves to produce its own digital unit, Libra.

Unregulated by any central bank, bitcoin emerged as an attractive option for investors with an appetite for the exotic – although criminals have also seen its under-the-radar appeal. Debate has meanwhile raged over the status of the digital asset, launched in late 2008, as to whether it should be seen as a form of money, an asset or a commodity.

After the unit surpassed $1,000 for the first time in 2013, it increasingly began to attract the attention of financial institutions. AFP

Rohingya man reunites with family who were presumed dead at sea

Weeks after a funeral for the wife and daughter he thought had died at sea trying to reach him, Nemah Shah in Malaysia was stunned when he saw online images of them emerging from a refugee boat in Indonesia. What followed was an incredible reunion story retold to AFP during an in-depth investigation into human trafficking of the Rohingya. As he was still grieving the loss of his family, Shah said he was astonished to see his wife and daughter among a boatload of 100 Rohingya refugees who landed near the Indonesian town of Lhokseumawe in June. "When I recognised my wife and daughter," Shah said, referring to the online images, "it was the happiest day of my life." Video of the landing showed Shah's wife and daughter among those getting out of a rickety boat pulled to shore.

Chemical castration laws get president's approval

Pakistan has approved the chemical castration of rapists as part of sweeping new legislation sparked by outcry over the gang rape of a mother on a motorway. New laws approved by President Arif Alvi on Tuesday will see rape cases expedited through the courts and create the country's first national sex offenders register. "The provision of the chemical castration of repeat as well as first-time sex offenders... was added in the Anti-Rape Ordinance 2020", the president's office confirmed Wednesday. In September, protests erupted after a mother was raped on the side of the road near Lahore.

INDONESIA

President to get first Covid-19 vaccine shot

Indonesian President Joko Widodo said Wednesday he would be the first person in the country to be vaccinated for Covid-19 as he unveiled a campaign promising free inoculations for everyone in world's fourth most-populous nation. Widodo's announcement comes as Indonesia battles misinformation over the virus in order to stave off a fresh wave of infections, with some 630,000 recorded by Wednesday and more than 19,000 deaths. "The Covid-19 vaccine for all citizens will be FREE," Widodo said in a video on his Twitter account. The government originally said only health workers, the elderly and other key personnel would be given the vaccine for free. Widodo did not say when he would take the vaccine, or when the national inoculation program would start.

FB launches PR assault on Apple over ad data

SAN FRANCISCO

FACEBOOK is again pushing back on new Apple privacy rules for its mobile devices, this time saying in full page newspaper ads that the social media giant is standing up for small businesses.

In ads that ran in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and other national US newspapers, Facebook said Apple's new rules "limit businesses ability to run personalized ads and reach their customers effectively."

"While limiting how personalized ads can be used does impact larger companies like us, these changes will be devastating to small businesses adding to the many challenges they face right now," the ad states.

The ads come after Apple said earlier this week it would begun spelling out what kinds of personal information is being collected by the digital services displayed in its app stores for iPhones and other products made by the company.

Apple also has plans to impose a new mandate that will require all iPhone apps to obtain permission before tracking a person's activities on the device. That surveillance is currently done automatically by many apps, and would force people to go to the time and trouble to block the tracking in the settings of each app. Apple says it will oust apps from its stores if they try to bypass the new anti-tracking rule when it becomes effective next year.

In many instances, the data scooped up by apps is used to sell ads targeted at a particular person's interest and location, especially if their services are being offered for free.

Apple announced the changes were coming six months ago as part of an effort to help its customers gain a better understanding of how apps monitor their habits, tastes and whereabouts. At the time Facebook complained that the changes would hurt businesses' ability to personalise ads. AP

Heathrow can have 3rd runway: UK Supreme Court

Britain's Supreme Court ruled that Heathrow, one of the world's busiest airports, can build a third runway, overturning a legal decision to block the plan on environmental grounds as the aviation industry looks to recover from the pandemic. The nation's highest court struck down a Court of Appeal ruling in February that the UK government had failed to take into account climate change commitments when in 2018 it approved the new runway at the London airport. Heathrow successfully argued that the Court of Appeal had made errors of law.

London coroner says air pollution contributed to girl's death

LONDON

IN a British legal first on Wednesday, a coroner ruled that air pollution contributed to the death of a nine-year-old girl with severe asthma who lived by a busy road.

Ella Adoo-Kissi-Debrah died in February 2013 after a serious asthma attack. In the previous three years, she had been taken to hospital nearly 30 times with breathing difficulties.

The young girl lived in south-east London just 30 metres (yards) from a major ringroad in the capital which is often clogged with heavy traffic.

"Air pollution made a material contribution to Ella's death," assistant coroner Philip Barlow said, in the first case to have poor air quality recorded as a factor on a death certificate.

"She was exposed to levels of nitrogen dioxide in excess of World Health Organization guidelines. The principal source of her exposure was traffic emissions."

He said it was also important to record a "recognised failure" to reduce those NO2 levels to within UK and EU limits, "which possibly contributed to her death".

Information was not provided to her mother, Rosamund, that may have prompted her to take action that might have prevented the girl's death, he added. A first inquest in 2014 determined that Ella died of acute respiratory failure. But the ruling was overturned and a new hearing ordered after a review of the case.

Air pollution expert Stephen Holgate found a "striking link" between spikes in NO2 and harmful particulate matter and the occasions she was taken to hospital for treatment. AFP

Spectrum auctions likely in March

However, the bands identified for 5G (3300-3600 Mhz) have been left out by the Cabinet

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

THE Union Cabinet on Wednesday approved the next round of telecom spectrum auctions with airwaves worth ₹3.92 lakh crore going under the hammer. However, the bands identified for 5G (3300-3600 Mhz) have been left out of this tranche.

According to telecom minister Ravi Shankar Prasad, the Department of Telecom (DoT) will issue a notice inviting bids by the end of this month and auctions for 20-year licences will be held by March 2021. Airwaves being offered are in the 700 MHz, 800 MHz, 900 MHz, 1800 MHz, 2100 MHz, 2300 MHz, and 2500 MHz frequency bands—a cumulative 2,251.25 MHz of spectrum worth ₹3.92 lakh crore at reserve prices.

With government revenues having taken a substantial hit from the Covid-19 fallout, income from spectrum auctions will be a respite, say industry analysts. However, they warn that the Centre may not net as much as it expects. During the last round in FY 2017-18, the Centre had put 2,354.5 MHz of spectrum under the hammer, worth a cumulative ₹5.63 lakh crore. It managed to sell just 965 MHz for ₹65,789 crore.

Meanwhile, the run-up to this next round has also been rife with industry-level differences—Jio (the only profitable telco in the market) had sought early auctions, while rivals Bharti Airtel and Vodafone Idea had indicated that they would be more comfortable with a later date.

Both Airtel and Vi have been hit hard by the AGR payouts, but early auctions are crucial for Jio since the licences for some of its most lucrative markets are set to expire next year.

Jio currently uses spectrum owned by bankrupt Reliance Communications through a sharing agreement. But come July 2021, its licences for the 800 Mhz band will expire in 18 out of the 21 telecom circles. Airtel and Vi will also see a few licenses expiring in the same time-frame, but they have backup spectrum assets in such circles and only need the cheaper 1800 Mhz band. In fact, Jio had written to the DoT in September this year protesting the delay in announcing auctions. "We reiterate that the inexplicable delay of four years in auction of spectrum since 2016 has created a situation of dire scarcity which is impacting the quality of experience and growth of services," it wrote.

CABINET APPROVES N-E POWER GRID PROJECT

The Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs on Wednesday approved the revised estimate of the North Eastern Region Power System Improvement Project at ₹6,700 crore. At a press briefing, Information and Broadcasting Minister Prakash Javadekar said the project would add 2,100 km of transmission lines and 2,000 km of distribution lines in Assam, Manipur, Meghalaya, Mizoram, Nagaland and Tripura. The scheme was being implemented by public sector undertaking POWERGRID and funded 50:50 by the World Bank and the government. It would improve the availability and reliability of power in the States, he said. "The scheme shall also increase the per capita power consumption of the States, and shall contribute to the total economic development of the North-Eastern region. The scheme was approved in December 2014," the government said in an official statement.

Banks should focus more on cash flow-based lending: Das

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

BANKS must lessen reliance on collateral security and instead focus on cash-flow-based lending to improve the credit-to-GDP ratio, said Reserve Bank of India (RBI) Governor Shaktikanta Das. Speaking at a webinar on investor education organised by National Council of Applied Economic Research (NCAER), Das said higher credit to GDP ratio and greater financial inclusion are among the prerequisites for achieving demographic dividend and accelerated growth.

"To improve the credit to GDP ratio, access to credit and cost of credit need to be addressed by lesser reliance on collateral security and greater cash-flow based lending.Credit bureaus and the proposed Public Credit Registry (PCR) framework are expected to improve the flow of credit as well as credit culture," Das said on Wednesday. According to RBI data, scheduled commercial bank's credit as per cent of GDP plunged to 50.99 per cent in FY20 from 51.51 a year ago.

Das also underscored that financial inclusion in the country is poised to grow exponentially with a large section of tech savvy millennials joining the workforce, social media blurring the urban-rural divide and technology shaping policy interventions. "Several initiatives have been taken for the creation of enabling digital infrastructure at the ground level. Going forward, harnessing the near universal reach of bank accounts across the length and breadth of the country, there needs to be greater focus on penetration of sustainable credit, investment, insurance and pension products by addressing demand side constraints with enhanced customer protection," the governor said in his keynote address. The interventions in financial education would have to be customised (local language) keeping the different target audience in mind, The scaling up of Centre for Financial Literacy project at the block level would also be the cornerstone of community led participatory approaches to achieve greater financial literacy.

Das, however, noted that "in a large country like ours with an aspiring population, other stakeholders like think tanks, and research institutions should come forward to shoulder the responsibility of increasing financial literacy.

STATES BENEFIT

Centre extends deadline to complete reforms

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

THE Centre on Wednesday has extended the deadline for states to implement reforms to be eligible for additional borrowing till February 15. When Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman announced the Atmanirbhar Bharat package, states were permitted to raise additional two per cent over and above the three per cent of the Gross State Domestic Product (GSDP) under Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management (FRBM) Act.

However, to avail the additional two per cent, certain conditions were imposed. While the first 0.5 per cent can be borrowed without any condition,for the next 0.5 per cent states were asked to opt for 'Option 1' of the mechanism to meet GST compensation shortfall. For the remaining one per cent, each of four reform measures will enable 0.25 per cent of additional borrowing — making a total of ₹2.14 lakh crore available. Earlier, states were given a timeline of December 31 to complete the reforms. According to the finance ministry, the extension of date for completion of reforms is likely to motivate other states to avail the linked financial benefits. So far, 9 states have implemented 'One Nation One Ration Card' and 4 states have completed the ease of doing business reform.

India to tighten rules of origin, slap higher duties to curb imports

JAYANTA ROY CHOWDHURY @ New Delhi

INDIA is planning to raise duties on a range of imports including electronics, vegetable oils, leather goods and textile products as well as tighten rules of origin to check re-routing of imports and to incentivise local production.

"We plan to notify some of the increases before budget, but most of the duty changes will come in with the budget," said officials. The government will also continue to work to see to it that the duty structure is rationalised with finished products being taxed at higher rates and raw materials at lower. Officials pointed out that there has been a surge in imports of select products despite an overall de-growth in imports. For instance, import of vegetable oils including soybean rose by 34 per cent just in November.

To incentivise Indian farmers to plant more oilseeds, along with an oilseeds mission, the government intends to gradually hike duties on the more popular vegetable oils grown in the country.

Officials added that the electronic good imports rose by 12.25 per cent in November, despite a rise in local production. "We have found re-routing of products originating mostly from China through countries with which we have FTAs to take advantage of lower duties. These include electronics, leather products and textiles," officials said.

In September, the government had notified new customs rules which allow officials to demand proof of significant value addition for goods imported under preferential duty agreements. "Despite complaints from importers of red tape, we still find a considerable re-routing as the spike in electronics imports shows," said finance ministry officials.

The government is considering bringing in self certification under rules of origin to address genuine importer concerns, while enforcing random checks to see that rules are being adhered.

Sebi stiffens shareholding criteria, eases MF norms

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ Chennai

THE Securities and Exchange Board of India (Sebi) on Wednesday tightened the public shareholding criteria for listed companies and relaxed the eligibility norms for entities who intend to launch mutual fund companies.

As per the extant norms, all companies need to ensure a minimum public shareholding of 10 per cent to stay listed and need to enhance this holding to at least 25 per cent within three years. And this 25 per cent needs to be maintained at all times thereafter. Listed companies that are going through corporate insolvency resolution process (CIRP), however, need to maintain a public shareholding of at least five per cent to be able to qualify for trading on stock exchanges.

CIRP-bound entities are treated differently. At present, during CIRP, if the public shareholding falls below 10 per cent they can continue to have their shares traded on bourses but are required to bring the public shareholding to at least 10 per cent within a period of 18 months and to 25 per cent within 3 years.

Separately, Sebi said that even loss-making entities can launch or become sponsors of mutual fund companies as long as such entities have a net-worth of at least ₹100 crore. This networth of the AMC has to be maintained till the time the AMC makes profit for five consecutive years, said Sebi.

The market watchdog said this move follows a proposal made by a working group that was constituted under the aegis of Sebi's mutual fund advisory committee (MFAC). All mutual funds are directed to segregate and ring-fence all assets and liabilities of mutual fund schemes and MFs are no longer required to issue physical unit certificates, Sebi said after its board meeting. This, according to Sebi, will reduce maximum permissible exit load and reduce the timeline for payment of dividend.

'Ex-facie breach of AoA in removal of Mistry as Tata Sons chairman'

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

THE Shapoorji Pallonji (SP) Group on Wednesday questioned in the Supreme Court the manner in which Cyrus Mistry was removed as the chairman of Tata Sons in 2016 and claimed that there was an 'ex-facie' breach of Articles of Association in the process.

Senior advocate Shyam Divan, appearing for SP Group, told a bench headed by Chief Justice S A Bobde about the importance of selecting the chairman of Tata Sons and said it is 'so crucial' as it affects so many stakeholders in several countries across continents. Divan referred to the Articles of Association of Tata Sons and said it provides that a selection committee shall be constituted to recommend the appointment of a person as the chairman of the board of directors and the board may appoint the person so recommended as the chairman, subject to Article 121 which requires the affirmative vote of all directors appointed pursuant to Article 104B. He added that the same process shall be followed for the removal of the incumbent chairman.

The Tatas, in a boardroom coup in October 2016, had sacked Cyrus Mistry as the Chairman of the Group. At present, the SC is hearing cross appeals filed by Tata Sons and Cyrus Investments against appellate tribunal NCLAT"s order (December 2019) which had restored Mistry as the executive chairman of Tata Group. At the outset, Divan said he would indicate 10 broad points, including the alleged oppression and purported breach of Article.

"My eighth point is that since we are dealing with an equitable jurisdiction, the status of Tata Sons as the controlling entity at the very top, at the apex of Tata Group is very, very important. Why? Because actions that take place in the board and in the conduct impacts minority shareholders, group entities, employees and shareholders of other group companies as well," he said.

Referring to the facts recorded by the National Company Law Appellate Tribunal in the matter, he said, "My final point is that the reliefs sought, such as proportionate representation, are consistent with the Companies Act". The matter will again be heard on Thursday.

NPCI adds reloadable wallet, offline payments for RuPay contactless cards

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

THE National Payments Corporation of India has enabled an offline payments feature on RuPay Contactless cards, which provides reloadable wallets within RuPay Card for day-to-day transit payments.

The retail payments network said that the feature has been enabled for retail payments on a pilot basis. The move is a part of the broader effort of the Reserve Bank of India to get offline digital payment capabilities to be developed, so that transactions can be processed in low network areas, basement shops and other similar places. This feature will provide reloadable wallets within the RuPay card where transactions can be processed even when network connection is absent or weak. Consumers can store money within the wallets for these transactions. The RuPay NCMC (National Common Mobility Card) offline wallet can be used to make ticket payments in transit including metros, bus tickets, cab fares etc enabling automatic quick cashless payments, thereby, reducing the traffic congestion and in turn the transit time.

"With the recent announcement to increase the transaction limit on contactless payments, customers are set to witness an all new level of security, convenience and safety," said Nalin Bansal, Head of RuPay & NFS, NPCI.

With aggressive plans and product launches in place, Jio Platforms is creating multiple monetization opportunities in the digital space. RJio is pioneering 5G in partnership with Qualcomm. Reliance Retail has maintained a strong performance amid a slowing economy. We believe revival in domestic demand, particularly in Agri, Auto and FMCG, would support RIL's operating rates and margins.

Auto component industry to take 4 years to recover from crisis

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

THE Automotive Component Manufacturers Association of India (ACMA) on Wednesday said that the turnover of the industry has plunged 34 per cent year-on-year to ₹1.19 lakh crore ($15.9 billion) during the first half of financial year 2021 (H1FY21) as production came to a complete halt during the June quarter. Despite a strong recovery seen in the second half of the fiscal, ACMA said that the industry is likely to report a high double-digit de-growth in FY21 and it would take at least four years to reach the peak levels of 2018-19.

"The auto industry witnessed a downturn in FY 2019-20, and the situation further aggravated with the outbreak of the pandemic and the lockdown. While the first quarter for FY21 was significantly stressed, the sales of vehicles witnessed improvement, month-on-month, in the second quarter with unlocking of the economy," said Vinnie Mehta, ACMA Director General. Exports of auto components fell 23.6 per cent to ₹39,003 crore in H1 2020-21 while imports fell 32.7 per cent to ₹37,710 crore at the same time.

"Although we are optimistic about our H2 performance, we will not be able to completely recover from the Q1 and Q2 fiascos," said ACMA President Deepak Jain. "The sector has been set back by 3-4 years and it could take a at least two to three years to reach the peak levels of 2018-19," he added. Jain said increasing commodity prices and raw material availability, especially those of semiconductors, are also proving to be major hurdles for the industry.

'RBI preserved fiscal stability amid Covid-19'

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

FORMER RBI Governor Duvvuri Subbarao on Wednesday said that managing a crisis is extremely difficult and the central bank had been successful in preserving the financial stability of the economy during the present Covid-19 crisis. He expects the government's fiscal deficit can be around 8 percent of the GDP for the current and next year.

Addressing a virtual event organised by industry body CII,' Subbarao noted that all actions of the RBI were driven by the dual objective of achieving financial stability and preventing a financial crisis, and secondly, transmitting money to productive sectors of the economy. "While managing a crisis is extremely difficult, the RBI has been successful in preserving the financial stability of the economy during the present COVID-19 crisis," he said. Subbarao added that though governments and central banks of the world are presently operating from the playbook of the Global Financial Crisis in 2008-09, the coronavirus crisis is quite different. "While GFC was an asset crisis that hit the financial sector first, the coronavirus crisis first impacted the real sector," he pointed out. The former RBI Governor said there were certain key elements to the central bank's monetary policy response so far. "The first was the extraordinary injection of liquidity through Open Market Operations, cut in CRR and SLR. The second was the easing of the financial conditions through the lowering of policy rates, reverse repo rates, Targeted Long-Term Repo Operations for specific sectors and third was the extension of the loan moratorium," he added.

AIFF to bid for 2027 Asian Cup

'New India' assurance

A fully-prepared Kohli & Co ready to take Australia by the horns as first Test begins today

VENKATA KRISHNA B @Chennai

ON WEDNESDAY, Virat Kohli called his personality a reflection of "new India (that) takes up challenges and is filled with optimism and positivity". Over the course of the next 34 days — a majority of it without him — the team he has moulded since leading them for the first Test at Adelaide in 2014, will come up against many challenges against a side that they left wounded when they last visited these shores in 2018/19.

At the fag end of a year which has given way to new normal, two evenly matched sides, filled with fiery pacers and wily spinners with a set of flamboyant, unorthodox and compact batsmen, will go toe-to-toe. That they are straight away starting with a day/night fixture, a variety which has bridged the gap between bat and ball, would ultimately be a showdown that we have been waiting for.

That Kohli will come back to India after the first Test, definitely scales the Border-Gavaskar Trophy in favour of Australia. But in his absence, the rest of his teammates have a chance to show their captain, the character he keeps talking about. On Wednesday, Kohli showed plenty of optimism and positivity of what his deputy Ajinkya Rahane can bring to the table. The two are contrasting personalities and in the couple of Tests he has led in the past, Rahane has proven to be a more attacking captain, but this will be something he hasn't encountered before. "Firstly we have had a lot of mutual understanding and respect over the years, we've had great partnerships which is based on trust and understanding. Jinks (Rahane) has done a tremendous job (as captain) in the two practice games. He seems to be very composed and he knows the strengths of our team and how we have to go about our things. It's a cultural effort and not only down to me strategising and putting things in front of people. It's the whole team that has bought into it. We already know the template that we play with and how we go about things. I've said this previously as well, I feel this is his time to really step up and perform strongly as an individual and as a captain as well, I'm sure he'll do a great job when I'm gone," Kohli said.

Before he leaves to India, Kohli has a chance to give Rahane some cushion. The many variables of a day/night Test and a versatile attack means India are capable of taking a series lead to the Boxing Day Test. But for that they should start on the front-foot. By going for Prithvi Shaw over Shubman Gill, who looked compact in the practice matches, he has shown faith, something you rarely saw of Kohli during his early years as captain. He has even chosen to go with the safe wicketkeeper Wriddhiman Saha instead of Rishabh Pant.

Day/night Tests have shown the entire course of the game could change in a session, especially the one under twilight, which makes it hard for captains to plan. "It's important to be prepared but you can't really pre-plan anything, especially in a pink-ball Test where there are so many variables. The pink ball Test brings in a few more variables like the twilight period, it's a tricky one to bat in that situation and bowling in the first session as well, it's up to being more disciplined and at night you have more to offer with the ball. We're ready to be able to come up with our plans into any situation that we're faced with."

LET THE GAMES BEGIN

After more than three weeks of cricket in coloured clothing, the sport's longest format awaits two of its grandest nations. Here's a look...

TOP-ORDERS OF BOTH TEAMS

There are doubts over the forms of several players at the very top, Prithvi Shaw and Joe Burns for instance. The trouble with the pink ball is it's a nightmare for players who are out of form because of its behaviour. For the hosts, there could be a rejig with the likes of Matthew Wade a possible opening option.

LYON'S CONTROL

The pink ball has not been a spinner's friend, but that trend has been bucked by Nathan Lyon. He enjoys bowling with them, even under lights. Considering he has troubled India in the past, how well the visitors handle him could be a subplot with the three lead pacers possibly rotating.

Aussies look to put behind chaotic build-up

SWAROOP SWAMINATHAN @Chennai

EXACTLY a month ago, Tim Paine, Marnus Labuschagne and Matthew Wade among others had to be airlifted from South Australia because of a Covid-19 outbreak. In hindsight, it signalled the start of what has been a chaotic build-up for the hosts ahead of the Test series, beginning in Adelaide on Thursday. It included talks of shifting the opener from Adelaide, an injury to David Warner, concussion-related blows to multiple players, the sight of Steve Smith cutting short his training stint and walking back gingerly and a serial lack of form for an opener.

So the first question Paine was asked at the pre-match match conference was entirely predictable. "Do you have a team?" Even though Australia have refused to name the XI on Wednesday — something the visitors did — the captain assured the hosts did have a line-up. Wading through his quotes, it looks likely that all-rounder Cameron Green will debut in the middle-order. Joe Burns could open, possibly with Matthew Wade, who has never batted there previously in 32 Tests. It's emblematic of their build-up but that doesn't mean Australia begin the series on the back foot.

Smith has shaken off whatever was troubling his back and Green has passed his fitness test. The bigger threat, though, is their three prong seam attack of Mitchell Starc, Josh Hazlewood and Pat Cummins.

Wrestlers Narsingh, Ravi disappoint

FIROZ MIRZA @ CHENNAI

AFTER India's Greco-Roman wrestlers drew blanks at the Individual World Cup in Belgrade, freestyle grapplers including World Championship bronze medallist Ravi Dahiya too failed to impress and made an early exit. Rustiness due to a lack of practice was evident as three out of four Indian grapplers in action at the event on Wednesday bowed out losing their first bout.

Dahiya, among four Indian wrestlers to qualify for the Tokyo Games so far, lost to Gamzatgadzsi Halidov of Hungary. The 23-year-old Haryana wrestler was leading 6-4 when his opponent pinned him to win the bout by a fall in the last minute of the contest. The Hungarian lost his next bout in the last-eight round thus drawing curtains on Ravi's campaign.

Making his international comeback after serving a four-year doping ban, Narsingh Yadav lost by a narrow margin of 10-9 to Osman Kubilay Cakici of Germany in the qualification round. Osman lost in the pre-quarterfinal which ended Narsingh's hopes of making it to the repechage round.

Sumit Malik (125kg) was also beaten 4-2 by Egor Olar of Moldova in the qualification round. With Olar's defeat in the quarterfinal, Malik's run also came to an end. Naveen kept India's hopes alive in the 70kg. He won his opening bout against German Shamil Ustaev 8-4 but lost to Islambek Orozbekov 12-2 in the quarterfinal. Despite losing, he can have a shot at bronze if Orozbekov wins his semifinal bout.

Improved show by women

Anshu Malik (57kg) assured India silver by entering the final. She lost to Anastasia Nichita on Wednesday. Pinki (55kg) also made it to bronze medal bout but lost to Russian Olga Khoroshavtseva 10-0.

Motera likely to host SMA T20 knockouts

VENKATA KRISHNA B @Chennai

THE newly-built Sardar Patel Motera Stadium in Ahmedabad is likely to host the Syed Mushtaq Ali knockout fixtures after the Gujarat Cricket Association (GCA) expressed interest to host them. With the stadium set to host two Tests and five T20Is against England in February-March, BCCI believes these matches would provide an ideal opportunity to test the nature of pitches.

The Syed Mushtaq Ali T20s is scheduled to begin on January 10 in six venues and though the BCCI has not confirmed the venues as yet, an official word is expected in the next couple of days. Unlike the previous editions, the T20 tournament this time would see the Elite and Plate teams compete separately which will be followed by a knockout phase. As reported earlier, Mumbai, Chennai, Indore, Bengaluru, Kolkata and Vadodara will most likely host the league phase. The indications from the BCCI is that all the venues except for Mumbai is locked as there are still doubts whether the city would be able to host the matches as Maharashtra hasn't relaxed lockdown norms.

Chennai will play host to the Plate division, which will involve eight teams. With 30 Elite teams (including two who gained promotion) pooled together in five groups comprising six teams and eight in Plate division, the Super League could still continue. But logistical issues that needs to be sorted. For instance, teams would undergo Covid-19 test upon their arrival in the host city on January 2, with two more lined up on 4th and 6th. Only if all three return negative, they will be allowed into the bio-bubble, where there will be a test every five days.

Bengaluru FC players training in Goa on Wednesday | BFC MEDIA

Bengaluru FC set to face winless Odisha

ASHIM SUNAM @Bengaluru

After each passing game, one can sense an improvement in Bengaluru FC's performance, especially in the attacking third. New players did take time to settle down, but things are working well as was witnessed in their 4-2 win over Kerala Blasters in the last game. After a few draws initially, they have managed two wins in last three contests. They will be keen to carry on that impressive form against winless Odisha FC at GMC Stadium on Thursday.

New strikers Cleiton Silva and Kristian Opseth are showing signs of understanding. If the former has scored two goals, the latter looked sharp against Kerala. Sunil Chhetri also impressed while midfielder Dimas Delgado has been brilliant. These set of Bengaluru players are crucial throughout the season. In the first couple of games, their attackers lacked colour. Head Coach Carles Cuadrat believes that with time, they have got better. "Any kind of football is special. It has its own speed, tempo and situations. When you are a foreigner and arriving into a country, it takes time. Kristian and Cleiton took time to adjust and you can see that game after game they are getting better," said the Spaniard, who is aware of the threat Odisha will possess.

Odisha, who lie second last on the table, might have been a major disappointment, failing to record a single win, but they will be hungry to get their first full points of the season. But, they will have to improve on all areas of the game. Odisha head coach Stuart Baxter wants the team to make good use of the ball when in possession.

"We need to be better at extending our attacks, to make them longer based on being better in possession. The longer attacks, if we can gain momentum and take momentum away from the opposition, it is going to help us," said Baxter.

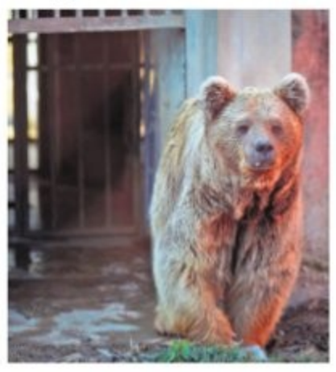
Islamabad zoo shut after last 2 animals shifted

ZOOLOGY

ISLAMABAD: The only zoo in Pakistan's capital – which drew international condemnation for its treatment of lonely elephant Kaavan -- closed on Wednesday after its final occupants were relocated abroad.

Two Himalayan bears named Bubloo and Suzzee were the last to leave the Islamabad facility, almost three weeks after the country's only Asian elephant was flown to a wildlife sanctuary in Cambodia.

"The Islamabad zoo is now completely closed for both public and officials," Saleem Shaikh, a spokesman for Pakistan's ministry of climate change told AFP.



"Both the bears will be flown to a sanctuary in Jordan." Shaikh said the move was arranged with the help of Four Paws International -- the same group that spearheaded the relocation of Kaavan whose plight championed by singer and Oscar-winning American actress Cher. She flew to Pakistan to see the elephant's departure, and then to Cambodia to watch him arrive.

The ailing health of Kaavan, an overweight, 35-year-old bull, highlighted the woeful state of Islamabad's zoo, where conditions were so bad that a judge in May ordered all animals to be moved.Two lions died during their relocation when zookeepers attempted to pry them from their pen by setting ablaze piles of hay.

An ostrich also died in the move. Islamabad Zoo was established in 1978 on 10 hectares of land. With little legislation to safeguard animal welfare, zoos across Pakistan are notorious for their poor conditions.

In 2018, some 30 animals died within months of a new zoo opening in the northwestern city of Peshawar, including three snow leopard cubs.

WHO ORDERED HOW MANY

With the first vaccines rolling out for limited inoculations in the US and elsewhere, the race is clearly on between countries to begin the process of mass vaccination. Here's a look at some of the specific vaccines and the countries that have ordered them in bulk as they prepare to begin the process of inoculation.

EXPRESS ILLUSTRATION

SIX STAGES OF A VACCINE

Usually, the vaccine has six stages from the time of research to full approval. The first is preclinical testing before the three phases of trials — Phase 1, Phase 2 and Phase 3 — finish. In the interim, if the results for the trials are out and if the regulators like the numbers, they will sanction Emergency Use Authorisation for the vaccine. It's where the likes of the Pfizer-BioNTech vaccine are at this stage. After this, countries decide to give full approval for mass inoculation.

*Covax is an initiative to ensure that poor countries have access to vaccines at an accessible rate

1.6bn Billion As it stands, no country has ordered more vaccine doses than India with 1.6 bn.

PFIZER-BIONTECH

The dosage consists of two shots 21 days apart. Trials showed it is approximately 95% effective. People in the UK, US and a few other countries have already started receiving the first of two jabs under the Emergency Use Authorisation programme. Vaccine is based around cutting-edge mRNA. The one big potential problem of this vaccine is that it can be stored at temperature levels below -70 degree celsius. The research first began as early as 11 months ago when Covid-19 wasn't even declared a pandemic.

EU 300mn Japan 120mn US 100mn UK 40mn

MODERNA

Two dosages split by a month. Trials showed an over 94% efficacy rate. Is expected to receive nod for emergency use authorisation in the US in a few days. Like Pfizer-BioNTech, vaccine tech is based around mRNA. It can be stored at around -20 degree Celsius for up to six months. Began researching and developing from January, vaccine efforts funded by the US govt and developed in parnership with National Institutes of Health.

EU 160mn US 100mn Canada 56mn UK 50mn

JOHNSON & JOHNSON

A one-shot vaccine at this point, with trials launched back in September. Will have a potential advantage over other developers if their one-shot jab works because of the ease of storage plus it requires only one shot. Phase 3 trials were paused to investigate an adverse reaction in October. Phase 3 results are expected in January. Simultaneously, the company is also working on trials to look into the efficacy over two jabs of the vaccine.

ASTRAZENECA-OXFORD ■ US 500mn ■ India 500mn ■ EU 400mn ■ *Covax 300mn

Two doses a month apart, with trials showing different efficacy results (people who had received a half first dose had 90% efficacy while the ones who had received the full dose had 62%) but this wasn't the plan. Late stage trial numbers expected within the next month. It can be stored in a refrigerator for six months. Known as Covidshield in India, the Serum Institute of India did apply to the Indian government for Emergency Use Authorisation. Likely to be cheap and because it's easy to store, most of the developing world have hung on their hat on the efficacy of this vaccine. Has since tied up with the Russian vaccine developers to see if that collaboration can result in a better efficacy rate.

NOVAVAX

India 1bn USA 110mn Canada 76mn UK 60mn

Two doses, three weeks apart. Trials for a Covid-19 vaccine began in May, with initial numbers proving to be good. Numbers from ongoing Phase 3 trials in a few countries expected to come in the first quarter of 2021. What's of interest is that the US-based company have already entered into a huge agreement with Serum Institute of India for the production of as many 2 billion doses by 2021 end.

GAMALEYA RESEARCH INSTITUTE (SPUTNIK V)

Two shots, three weeks apart. Came out with a statement on Monday which put their efficacy at 91.4%. Clinical trials began in June. Has to be stored in a freezer. It has been introduced for emergency use in Russia some time ago.

Lab-grown meat to debut in eatery

After Eat Just announces its sale, upscale Singapore restaurant gets ready for weekend test

GENETICS

SINGAPORE: Lab-grown chicken meat will make its debut at a Singapore restaurant in a culinary first this weekend after the company behind the product announced its inaugural sale Wednesday.

US start-up Eat Just said earlier this month that its product had been approved for sale in the city-state as an ingredient in chicken nuggets after Singapore became the first country to allow meat created without slaughtering any animals to be sold. Consumption of animals is an environmental threat as cattle produce potent greenhouse gas methane, while logging to create pastures destroys natural barriers against climate change.

On Wednesday, the company said it had made its first commercial sale of the product to

WHAT IS THIS?

Because consumption of animals is an environmental threat as cattle produce potent greenhouse gas methane, companies are looking into the prospect of creating lab-grown meat. Singapore became the first country to approve the ingredient for sale. Multiple companies have been trying to come up with meat in this manner because of issues surrounding climate change.

1880, a restaurant in Robertson Quay, a posh riverside entertainment centre.

Eat Just chief executive Josh Tetrick said the news "moves us closer to a world where the majority of meat we eat will not require tearing down a single forest, displacing a single animal's habitat or using a single drop of antibiotics".

The restaurant will start serving it from Saturday, the company said. Three cultured chicken dishes will be served, "each bite influenced by a top chicken-producing country in the world: China, Brazil and the United States. This is a very exciting collaboration for me," said Colin Buchan, the restaurant's executive chef who used to cook for footballer David Beckham. "I think people are going to love it." Demand for sustainable meat alternatives is rising due to growing pressure from consumers about the environment and animal welfare, but other products in the market are plant-based.

Meat consumption is projected to increase more than 70 percent by 2050, and lab-grown alternatives have a role to play in ensuring a secure food supply, the company said.

There were concerns that lab-grown varieties would be too expensive, but a spokesman for Eat Just said the company had made "considerable progress" in lowering the cost.

Singapore, the high-tech city-state, has become a hub for the development of sustainable foods, with start-ups producing goods ranging from lab-grown "seafood" to dumplings made with tropical fruit instead of pork.

FACT OF THE MATTER

Ready for lunar probe return

SPACE

Chinese ground crews are standing by for the return of a lunar probe bringing back the first fresh samples of rock and debris from the moon in more than 45 years. The Chang'e probe is expected to land in the Siziwang district of the vast Inner Mongolia region late Wednesday or early Thursday. It fired its engines early Wednesday to put it on course before the orbiter separates from the return vehicle, with all systems functioning as expected, the China National Space Administration said. Recovery of the return vehicle will be complicated by its small size, darkness and heavy snow, state media reported.

Obscurity to popularity

TECHNOLOGY

Before this week, few people were aware of SolarWinds, a Texas-based software company providing vital computer network monitoring services to corporations and government agencies around the world.But the revelation that elite cyber spies have spent months secretly exploiting SolarWinds' software to peer into computer networks has put many of its highest-profile customers in national governments and Fortune 500 companies on high alert. They're not a household name the same way that Microsoft is. That's because their software sits in the back office," said Rob Oliver, a research analyst at Baird.

Shackleton artefacts to remain in UK

EXPLORATION

LONDON: A sled and flag used in one of explorer Ernest Shackleton's famed expeditions to the South Pole have been bought by a British government-funded body to keep the treasured artifacts in the U.K.

The National Heritage Memorial Fund, a government-funded body, said Wednesday that it paid 204,000 pounds ($274,000) to help purchase the two items, used in the first of three British Antarctic expeditions led by Shackleton in the early 1900s. The artifacts will be donated to two English museums.

Earlier this year, British authorities slapped a temporary export ban on the artifacts. The expedition was named Nimrod after the ship, which came within less than 100 miles (160 kilometers) of the South Pole for the first time in 1909. But before reaching their target, the explorers were forced to turn back, having stretched their rations to the limit.

Despite ultimately ending in failure, the expedition is considered the greatest advance to the pole in history, and set the stage for Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen's successful trek just two years later.

The 11-foot (3.35-meter) wooden sled was one of four used to haul supplies and equipment across the Antarctic tundra. The flag, which features a red unicorn head and golden anchor, appears in many grainy photographs from the journey.

"Very little from the expedition survives," said Jeremy Michell, senior curator at the National Maritime Museum in London. "In our Polar gallery that we've got, we have one item which is a rather uninspiring lamp racket from Nimrod. And you can't really tell the same dynamic stories that you can when you've got a sledge."

Shackleton never reached the South Pole and died of a heart attack in 1922 off South Georgia, a British overseas territory, during a fourth Antarctic expedition.

The sled and flag were owned by Eric Marshall, a surgeon and polar explorer who accompanied Shackleton on Nimrod's "sledge march" to the South Pole. Marshall brought the items back to Britain and in the 1950s donated them to his former school.

Kangaroos can 'communicate'

ZOOLOGY

LONDON: Not just dogs or horses, even kangaroos are capable of communicating with human beings, if a latest finding is to be believed. According to The Guardian, a study conducted by the University of Sydney and the University of Roehampton in London showed that kangaroos are indeed capable of intentionally communicating with humans, suggesting a higher level of cognitive function than previously thought. Researchers presented captive kangaroos with an "unsolvable task", in this case, food inside a box they couldn't open.Dr Alexandra Green, a co-author of the study, was quoted by Guardian as saying, rather than just give up when they couldn't open the box, the vast majority of the kangaroos looked to the researcher and then back to the box, a gesture interpreted as a request for help. Some of them actually approached him and started scratching and sniffing at him and then looking back at the box."

Fast walking in narrow corridors can increase Covid-19 transmission risk: Study

HEALTH

BEIJING: Fast walking in narrow spaces behind a group of people can significantly increase COVID-19 transmission risk, especially in children, according to a study which says virus-laden respiratory droplets can trail behind infected individuals moving through such corridors.

The results of the computer simulation, published in the journal Physics of Fluids, underscored the importance of the shape of spaces in predicting how virus-laden droplets move through the air.

While earlier studies highlighted the influence of objects, like glass barriers, windows, and air conditioners on airflow patterns and virus spread, the scientists from the Chinese Academy of Sciences in Beijing said these simulations usually assumed large, open indoor spaces.

However, the effect of nearby walls, like those that might exist in a narrow corridor have not been considered, the researchers added.

According to the current study, if a person walking in a corridor coughs, their breath expels droplets that travel around and behind their body, forming a wake in the same way a boat forms a wake in water as it travels.

The research revealed the existence of a "re-circulation bubble" directly behind the person's torso and a long wake streaming out behind them at approximately waist height.

"The flow patterns we found are strongly related to the shape of the human body," said

The research revealed that a recirculation bubble can be formed behind the walker | REPRESENTATIVE PIC

study co-author Xiaolei Yang.

"At two metres downstream, the wake is almost negligible at mouth height and leg height but is still visible at waist height," Yang said.

Once the airflow patterns were determined wherever on had been walking, the scientists then modelled the dispersal of a cloud of droplets expelled from the simulated person's mouth.

The experts believed the shape of the space surrounding the moving person is particularly critical for this part of the calculation of air.

In one mode of dispersal, the study noted that the cloud of droplets detaches from the moving person and floats far behind that individual, creating a floating bubble of virus-laden droplets.

In another mode, it said the cloud is attached to the person's back, trailing behind them like a tail as they move through the space.

"For the detached mode, the droplet concentration is much higher than for the attached mode, five seconds after a cough," said Yang.

"This poses a great challenge in determining a safe social distance in places like a very narrow corridor, where a person may inhale viral droplets even if the patient is far in front of him or her," he added.

The scientists warned that the danger is particularly high for children, since the cloud of droplets seem to hover at a distance above the ground that is about half the height of the infected person which is at mouth level for children.

Delayed reactions, masked emotions and waning attention span of the audience are making things hard for city comedians who are trying to lighten the atmosphere

Looking for LOLs

VIDYA IYENGAR

THEY say laughter is the best dose of medicine but city comedians are having a hard time delivering this. According to Pavan Venugopal, a techie and comedian who mainly performs in Kannada, the standup scene is now in a "reconstruction phase". "People are still in the lockdown mould mentally and it's very hard for us to bring their minds to the show. Even the reaction time to our best jokes is delayed. People may be okay with stepping out for a show but the comfort level that used to exist in the pre-pandemic days with people cheering us is going to take time," says Venugopal, who is a part of LOLbagh, the first youth Kannada standup comedy team.

Shankar Chugani has also noticed the same. While the frequency of shows may have gone up, there are also cancellations here and there. The comedian, who shot to fame with Comicstaan, says smaller crowds has also meant a drop in energy. "We are yet to see a point where people are relaxed and having a good time," he says. Comedienne Punya Arora feels there's an air of anxiety. "It's hard to gauge reactions because of masks," she points out.

Comedians are noticing the need to push harder, not only because people are not in a relaxed frame of mind for a laugh, but also because digital comedy content creators have burgeoned in the lockdown. "The attention span of people has gone down. If it was 30 seconds or more, now it's now less than 20 seconds. We need to up our material and stage presence," explains Venugopal.

Arora, who recently earned her first writing credit with Netflix show Masaba Masaba, adds that while they have their pros, an online show doesn't compare to a live one for her.

Comedian and founder of Graphicurry, Prasad Bhat, has no qualms in saying the scene is dead. "There has been no change since it was always dead for local comics. I haven't noticed if people are sensitive because for that people need to come for shows. Zoom shows are happening, but no one's coming for those either," he says.

Virtual communication fatigue is there no doubt but filmmaker and creator of The Improv, Saad Khan, agrees that there is a technique to navigating shows online.

"We had started doing Facebook lives prior to the pandemic, so in a way we understood the requirements. We keep our shows between 30-40 minutes, which are tight, breezy and funny. But there's a lot of hardwork that goes into it," says Khan, who has been more than busy with corporate shows too. "Interaction is key. Just like a physical show where a comic picks on one person, we do the same in an online show. No one knows whose turn it's going to be," he says.

When it comes to material, lockdown jokes are going to be the norm for at least 5-6 years, opines Venugopal. "There used to be this excitement about the next show – sharpening the edges from one show to another, streamlining things, writing new jokes. Now we don't know when the next show where you will be facing a crowd of 200-250 people is ever going to happen," he says.

Mail and merit: Driven by dedication

S LALITHA

A 55-year-old driver of the Mail Motor Service section of the Bengaluru Postal Region, R Balakrishna, has received the Meghdoot Award 2020. Seven postal employees across India have got this award this year.

His punctuality and dedication to serve the department have been appreciated. Owing to the pandemic, the presentation took place in Bengaluru on Tuesday instead of New Delhi.

CE caught up with him as he was doing his rounds on Wednesday amidst congratulatory wishes. "This is a big honour and I am happy to be recognised. I merely did my duty and do not feel I have done anything extraordinary," Balakrishna said. "The department is giving me a good salary, paying education fees of my two sons and gives a sponsored vacation every four years (LTC scheme). It has done more for me than I can repay."

City-born Balakrishna was orphaned when he was seven, and managed to study up to SSLC. He joined as a Group D staffer (known as MTS then) in the department in 1998 to clean vehicles and assist mechanics. Three years later, he was promoted as a driver.

It is in his role in transporting Speed Post articles for two decades that he excelled. He went out of his way to meet customers repeatedly, wait patiently and collect cheques. "Establishments like Infosys, Wipro and BEML are among those he collected bills from," said a department note detailing his achievements. He rarely takes leave, the note added.

V K Mohan, Senior Superintendent of Rail Mail Service, whose inspection vehicle Balakrishna has been driving for seven months says, "He is available anytime I call him to drive, even at the dead of night."

Balakrishna hopes that his sons too enter the postal department some day.

R Balakrishna receives ₹21,000 and a gold-plated silver medal from Chief Postmaster General, Karnataka Circle, Sharda Sampath

IN REMEMBRANCE

I spy a salute

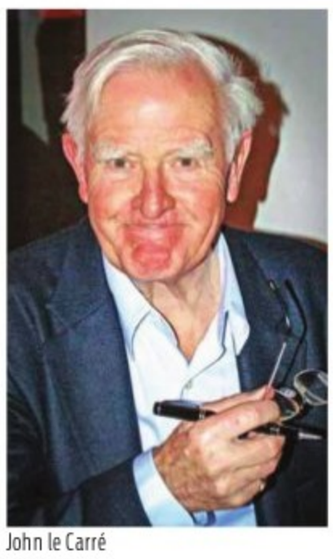
SHWETA TANEJA

IN my pre-teens, I wanted to be James Bond. A daring hero who could save damsels (I saved sexy boys, swooning in my arms) while sipping on martinis in exotic bars of five-star hotels, in handcrafted expensive suits (designer gowns in my case). I imagined myself racing through the alluring world of espionage, delightful deceits and gun-totting, gasping action. I wanted to grab all the glamour with my grubby hands.

Then I grew up and met George Smiley, an espionage spy like Bond, in John le Carré's Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy (1974). Smiley was anti-Bond. Instead of the swashbuckling suaveness, Smiley paraded reality. He was middle aged, balding, badly dressed, excessively polite, could be bullied, and constantly dealt with a runaway wife. In Call for the Dead (1961), le Carré's first novel, he was compared to a toad; in A Murder of Quality (1962), he was called a mole.

Throughout his career of 25 novels, le Carré – whose real name was David Cornwell and who, unlike armchair writers like this one, worked in the British intelligence before becoming a full-time writer writing espionage – alluded to how the Bondian universe was a fantastical joyride. A modern day fairy tale, with a spy as a hero, cardboard archenemies and damsels in distress. Le Carré consciously made the characters that inhabited his fictional universe, like Smiley – spies, politicians, damsels, charming liars, villains – a little too real. They were bespeckled bureaucrats who wiped their glasses with their ties, dealt with budget cuts, deceptive spouses and girlfriends and confounding treacheries of their governments, leaving them gutted at morality's knife edge. The almost satirical The Looking Glass War (1965), for example, is plotted around an espionage mission that becomes pointless at the end. The Spy Who Came in From the Cold (1963), which put le Carré in international stardom, portrays methods that its spies employ which are inconsistent with perceived Western values.

The writer in me guzzled le Carré's honeycomb of distrust, human fragilities and broken systems, shaking off the simplistic, glamour-verse of Bond. While developing my tantrik detective series, that two spy worlds inspired my world-building. My protagonist, Anantya Tantrist, was very much a Bondian heroine, trolling Delhi's streets at night, kicking supernatural threats while swigging somason-the-rock; the world she inhabited however was filled with grubby treachery, inspired by the greys le Carré brought into his universes, where friends betrayed and there was no right path, but murky choices, rendering all heroic efforts insufficient.



John le Carré

It's this constant tension – between the values protagonists stand for, and the murky methods they employ to protect them including deception, violence and betrayal – that manages to scrap the very values.

In our world of disinformation campaigns, ego-boosting echo chambers and fake news, le Carré's fictional world, like powerful fiction today, slithers underneath our fabricated reality, forcing us to dive into the filthy truth about ourselves and the murky morals in all their grubby glamour.

SABU ALOYSIUS

Kim Ki-duk

The echo lives on

GOING down memory lane, Kim Ki-duk, aka Kim Ki, was the first international director I have met. It was with great sorrow that I heard the news of his death in Latvia, after he suffered from Covid-19. His films had great quality. If memory serves me right, it was in 2013 when I first heard his name. Initially, it sounded like a fruit to me. However, the buzz made in The International Film Festival of Kerala (IFFK) made me to go to the theatre to watch his film. It was overflowing with so many people that I thought of going back after seeing the crowd. Thanks to my friend who was volunteering, I somehow managed a seat and watched Spring, Summer, Fall, Winter... and Spring. The Korean film was beautiful, it's the story of life and the circle of sin. I fell in love with the director.

The next thing I did was run through the movie catalogue. I saw that a movie called Arirang was coming up next. From the description, I came to know that it was shot by Kim Ki himself. I knew there was no way I was going to miss it. Therefore, this time I reserved the seat and went. But here again, the theatre was brimming with people. This was also the first time I got the chance of hearing people chanting a director's name – "Kim Ki, Kim Ki..." – Until then, I had heard the same only for actors. Once the film was done, my friend and I got into a deep discussion. "Why are people clapping for nothing?," my friend asked. However, I opposed his thoughts. It's a self-made documentary where he places himself in front of the camera and it's a confessional portrait. Kim Ki was discussing the things that happened while shooting his earlier film Dream, which make him withdraw from filmmaking altogether. In the documentary, he is asking his shadow, "Why can't you make films now?". Even after seven years, that dialogue echoes in my mind at times. "Sabu, why can't you make films now?"

Maybe because of that constant echo, my movie Life Is Beautiful happened and I got the courage to helm a film with my co-director Arunkumar M. To put it briefly, Arirang is an experimental film at odds with convention.

I consider myself lucky to have watched Arirang with Kim Ki-duk a couple of rows away in the same theatre. He was a guest for the screening. When the film was done, I rushed over to see him, but it was too crowded to go anywhere near him. It, however, didn't stop me. I followed him for a while and I got the chance to shake hands with him. Even though I couldn't speak to him, this small gesture alone is something I will cherish my whole life.

FIT BIT

SARPASANA
(SNAKE POSE)

In Sanskrit, Sarpa means 'snake' and asana means 'pose' or 'posture'. It is an intermediate prone backbend that is similar to Bhujangasana (cobra pose). In addition to its physical benefits, which include improving posture and helping respiration, it improves focus and balances several of the body's chakra energy centres, including: Anahata (heart) — the centre of love, acceptance and forgiveness. It is Sarpasana's aligning of the spine that allows life-force energy (prana) to flow up through the chakras, opening and balancing them. It also helps to balance Vata and Pita Dhoshas.

STEPS

- First, lie flat on the stomach with the legs straight and the feet together.
- Interlock the fingers and place the hands on top of the buttocks. Place the chin on the floor. This is the starting position. Inhale deeply and slowly.
- Then, using the lower back muscles, raise the chest as far as possible from the floor. Push the hands further back and raise the arms as high as possible.
- Now, imagine the arms are being pulled from behind.
- Raise the body as high as possible without straining.
- Now, retaining breath, squeeze the shoulder blades together and look forward.
- Hold for as long as is comfortable.
- Exhaling, slowly return to the starting position and relax the whole body. Release the hands and relax the arms by the sides of the body. Turn the head to one side.
- This is one round. Perform up to 5 rounds.

BENEFITS

- Stretches chest, lungs, shoulders and abdomen with increased influence on the chest than Bhujangasana.
- Tones and strengthens the heart.
- Improves both the removal of carbon dioxide and the intake of oxygen.
- Tones the kidneys, removing any stagnant blood and improving health of the whole body.
- Strengthens the adrenal gland, which is responsible for secretions of adrenaline, cortisol and other stress hormones. It is the benefit of asanas.
- Expands and opens the chest which encourages deep breathing as well as helping to correct rounded shoulders.
- It is good to practice this for a healthy back and to give general balance to the body.

LIMITATIONS

- People with heart conditions, high blood pressure, peptic ulcer, hernia, intestinal tuberculosis or hyperthyroidism should not practise it without the guidance of a yoga expert.

All about 'muscle' MASS APPEAL

GET MOVING
Shwetambari Shetty

MUSCLE is the only age reversible organ in the body. This may sound confusing. If you have good muscle tone, you can age gracefully. So everyone should train to build or maintain muscle mass. You will need patience because it isn't easy to build muscle and it takes years of dedication. So, the next time you hear someone say, "I don't want to lift weights because I don't want to become bulky", you could either ignore or maybe educate them because it is not easy to build muscle.

Here is the foundation of muscle training:

- When muscles are stressed beyond normal demands, they respond
- If the stress placed on the muscle is significantly greater than normal demands, they respond negatively. The large scale damage leads to several days of weakness, commonly known as soreness. Excessive soreness may not lead to larger muscle gain and strength
- What we need, however, is to systematically stress the muscle in a progressive manner, known as progressive overload
- This means the muscles respond positively when the training stress is just slightly greater than normal. The small scale trauma leads to muscle and strength gain over a period of time

TAKE-AWAY: Too much soreness is not good. Just a little bit of intensity week over week is all you need for stronger muscle remodeling. But how do you put more structure in your training to ensure just the right amount of muscle/ strength gain? Here is how:

Progression

To maximise strength and muscle, you need to add external resistance (dumbbells, barbells, kettlebells, etc.) The resistance should be heavy enough to fatigue the muscle within 90 seconds, that's the limit of the anaerobic energy system. Since it's impractical to time every set, 15 reps would be a good target assuming six seconds per repetition. Lets put this into practice:

EXERCISE: Do 15 reps of shoulder press (30 kg). At this weight, you can perform 10 reps in week 1. In the subsequent weeks, you can aim to achieve 12 reps, followed by 13 and so on until you are able to get 15 reps at this load. Once you are able to perform 15 reps, you will increase the weight by 5 per cent and start chasing the 15 reps target again at the new load (31.5 kg in this case). Please note that the strength gains at some point will stop (strength plateau) and that's when you will need to variate the exercise and follow the similar process mentioned above.

Specificity

The idea is to achieve the desired objective of training through working the right set of muscles. For example: If the aim is to squat with a heavier load, one needs to strengthen the quadriceps, glutes and core. But that being said, these muscles should not be trained to the exclusion of opposing muscles. Whether it's a sport or the idea is to improve the activities of daily living, it's equally important to train all the major muscle groups on a weekly split.

Overload

As per the American College of Sports Medicine, if you are exerting yourself at a certain load between 8 and 12 repetitions, you can assume that's about 70 to 80 per cent of your maximal strength (1 rep max). A general guideline is to increase the load by 5 per cent every time you achieve the target reps, assuming the exercise was performed until failure to achieve that number of reps. This gradual increase in resistance is known as overload, and if followed religiously for 12-16 weeks, this will facilitate a good amount of muscle and strength gains.

THE COOL factor

Lower temperature can put people with existing heart conditions at risk. Here's how you can prevent heart attacks in winter

Wear warm clothes to limit exposure to cold weather

SIGNS OF HEART ATTACKS

1. Pain or discomfort in the chest that can sometimes feel like squeezing or pressure
2. Pain in the body, including the arms, back, neck, or jaw
3. Shortness of breath
4. Feeling lightheaded or nauseous

If someone is feeling any of the above symptoms then they should immediately contact a hospital or healthcare provider

Get a flu shot as a precautionary measure

DR. PRADEEP KUMAR D

WINTER is often associated with several health risk factors such as heart diseases, respiratory disorders and highly contagious viral infections. People, however, tend to focus more on common ailments such as cold, fever and allergies etc. The drop in temperature can significantly impact your heart health and can put people with existing heart conditions at maximum risk of heart attack or a cardiac arrest. These heart attacks can emerge from various factors such as low temperature, air pressure, wind and humidity. Therefore, understanding how winter can affect your heart health can go a long way in preventing a heart attack during this season.

Staying in a cold environment often causes our bodies to make certain physiological adjustments to preserve our core body temperatures. These adjustments can present a challenge to people with heart disease and can cause:

- Increase in heart rate
- Increase in blood pressure
- Lowering in heart beat and making it substantially harder for the heart to pump

An increase in the propensity for blood clotting

Precautions to take during winter

People with heart ailments can adopt the following precautions to prevent a cardiac arrest during this season:

- Limit your exposure to the cold weather and wear warm clothes
- Avoid stressing yourself as it can trigger a cardiac emergency
- Avoid overheating yourself as it causes blood vessels to suddenly dilate—which can lead to hypotension (low blood pressure) in a person with heart disease
- Limit your alcohol consumption
- Get a flu shot
- Keep healthy habits intact such as, starting an indoor exercise programme, having homemade warm meals and drinks regularly. This will give your body energy it needs to keep you warm.

Watering it down

DR PRASHANT C DHEERENDRA

It is easy to believe that more hydration is always better. Every individual is directed to drink lots of water on a daily basis. While it's definitely a good practice, everything has two extremes. What you may not be aware of is that too much water can be harmful. Water intoxication is an existing condition in spite of how ironic it may sound. Overdoing hydration can be dangerous for your health, causing damage afflicting the routine bodily functions. Maintaining hydration levels for patients undergoing hemodialysis is an even bigger challenge.

Signs of overhydration

Overhydration among dialysis patients can cause edema where your feet, ankles and wrists swell up. Maintaining optimal blood pressure is another challenge. Undergoing dialysis or not, do not turn a blind eye to any such signs. When left unattended, it can turn serious, or even lead to death in worst-case scenarios.

Result of Overhydration

Hyponatremia is the medical term used for such a condition. Overhydration makes it difficult for the kidneys to function normally. If not examined in the earlier days, it may lead to symptoms of heart failure, risking the patient's life. Treatment varies depending on the severity of your condition. You will be asked to follow one or all of these solutions:

1. IVs: Saline solutions may be injected into your body in order to heighten the salt content in your blood.
2. Medicines: Prescription of medicines to help and retain the sodium levels in your body by helping your kidneys get rid of more urine.
3. Dialysis: In severe case scenarios, you may have to support your kidneys in filtering and excretion by undergoing dialysis.

The right water diet

Managing your liquid intake in terms of both the right amount and the right time plays an important role in preventing hyponatremia. Consuming eight glasses of water per day is a generalised idea in all minds. But the normal water intake level cannot be the same for everybody as it also depends on various factors like health conditions, size, weather and physical activities.

For a dialysis patient, liquid intake has to be given utmost priority. Here's how overhydration can be avoided:

- Always maintain a track of your fluid intakes.
- Consume water from very small cups.
- Eat frozen fruits and vegetables.
- Keep a check on salt intake.

For others:

- Male: 13 glasses or 3 litres approximately.
- Female: Over 2 litres or 9 glasses of fluid per day. If pregnant, up to 10 glasses and a mother who is breastfeeding, 12 glasses
- Kids and teenagers: 8 glasses of fluid daily

Additionally, it is advisable to treat related conditions like adrenal gland insufficiency which would contribute to hyponatremia. Educating oneself about the impact of diuretic medications or any new prescriptions is important.

NUGGETS

FIRST WEEK AFTER HOSPITAL CRUCIAL FOR COVID PATIENTS

Many studies earlier showed that in the first few months after their Covid-19 hospital stay, patients face a high risk of ongoing health problems, trips back to the hospital, and even death, but now the researchers have found that the first week and a half may be especially dangerous. Covid-19 patients had a 40 per cent to 60 per cent higher risk of ending up back in the hospital or dying in the first 10 days, compared with similar patients treated at the same hospitals during the same months for heart failure or pneumonia. - IANS

SOULFUL

LEISURE AND LEARNING

There is a relationship between the educator and the student. Does the teacher maintain, whether knowingly or unknowingly, a sense of superiority, always standing on a pedestal, making the student feel inferior, the one who has to be taught? Obviously in this there is no relationship. From this arises fear on the part of the student, a sense of pressure and strain, and therefore the student learns, from his youth, about this quality of superiority. He is made to feel belittled, and so throughout life he either becomes the aggressor or is continuously yielding and subservient.

A school is a place of leisure, where the educator and the one to be educated are both learning. This is the central fact of the school-to learn. We do not mean by leisure having time to oneself, though that is also necessary. It does not mean taking a book and sitting under a tree or in your bedroom, reading casually. It does not mean having a placid state of mind, and it certainly does not mean being idle or using time for daydreaming. Leisure means having a mind that is not constantly occupied with something, with a problem, with some enjoyment, with some sensory pleasure. Leisure implies that a mind has infinite time to observe what is happening around oneself and within oneself, to listen, to see clearly. Leisure implies freedom, which is generally translated as doing as one desires, which is what human beings are doing anyway, causing a great deal of mischief, misery and confusion. Leisure is having a quiet mind, with no motive and so no direction. It is only in this state of leisure that the mind can learn, not only science, history, mathematics but also about oneself. And one can learn about oneself in relationship.

Can all this be taught in our schools, or is it something you read about and either memorize or forget? When the teacher and the taught are involved in really understanding the extraordinary importance of relationship, then they are establishing in the school a right relationship among themselves. This is part of education, greater than merely teaching academic subjects.

Relationship requires a great deal of intelligence. It cannot be bought in a book or be taught. It is not the accumulated result of great experience. Knowledge is not intelligence. Knowledge can be clever, bright and utilitarian, but that is not intelligence. Intelligence can use knowledge. Intelligence comes naturally and easily when the whole nature and structure of relationship is seen. That is why it is important to have leisure so that the man or the woman, the teacher or the student can quietly and seriously talk over their relationship, so that their actual reactions, susceptibilities, and barriers are seen, not imagined, not twisted to please each other or suppressed in order to placate the other.

Surely this is the function of a school: to help the student to awaken his intelligence and to learn the great importance of right relationship.

SHAKEELA TRAILER OUT

Richa Chadha turns southern star Shakeela Khan

CE FEATURES

THE trailer for Richa Chadha-starrer Shakeela is out. Directed by Indrajit Lankesh, the film traces the journey of Shakeela Khan, a prominent southern star and softcore performer who rose in the '90s. The trailer depicts Shakeela's life from a young girl to becoming a controversial star. Pankaj Tripathi essays a flamboyant leading man who stars alongside Shakeela in her record-breaking films. "I did what I did openly," Shakeela asserts in the trailer. "I never cheated anyone…. or forced them to see my films."

Shakeela is set to release in theatres in 5 languages on December 25. The film also stars Ester Noronha, Rajeev Pillai and Sheeva Rana.

Talking about the film, Inderjit Lankesh says, "Shakeela is truly a labour of love and commitment to show Shakeela's story is iconic in so many ways. Her story is almost folklore today, but the truth is that so much happened to her while she soared to success from nothing and then came back to nothing again. I'm happy that our producers are releasing the film so widely, giving me the confidence to know that it's a film that will appeal to the larger masses. To release in so many languages was important because that was the power of Shakeela."

An actor unravels: Tisca Chopra on her short film Rubaru

SHILAJIT MITRA

I blinked when I learned Tisca Chopra has made her directorial debut with Rubaru, a new short film out on YouTube. So allied has the actor been with the movement—having starred in critically-acclaimed shorts like Chhuri and Chutney—that I assumed she had already made the leap. As it turns out, Tisca was inspired by an old interview of Meryl Streep, where the Oscar-winning actor had spoken about hitting middle-age and the professional insecurities it brings.

"I started wondering if Meryl Streep is thinking this…" Tisca recalls, "then what will happen to people who are lesser mortals?" The answer is gingerly explored in Rubaru, where she essays an actor gradually fading from the screen. The meta-ness goes a level deeper: Tisca's character, Radha, is acting in a play, about a writer on the wane. The play, in turn, is inspired by the life of Virginia Woolf, one of the great troubled writers of the 20th century.

"The subtext of Rubaru is universal," Tisca says. "It's everyone's story to stay relevant and make sense of changing times." Watching the film now, six months after the suicide of Sushant Singh Rajput, it's hard not to connect it to a larger comment on the mental well-being of actors—and the nature of showbiz itself. "We shot the film in February so we had no inkling about that tragedy," Tisca says. "Subsequently, a lot of people, and not just actors, have opened up (about mental health). What I wanted to do with my film is take you inside an actor's psyche and the pain that goes into a performance."

This month, Tisca was meant to shoot a cameo for Raj Mehta's Jug Jug Jiyo—the film got delayed after several of the cast members tested positive for COVID-19. She's also expected to star in a web-series next year and direct her first feature film. "I think it's a great time to be telling stories and the way we are telling them,"
